TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS AND EASELS

Some of our gadgets may come to you now in plain wire, because we cannot secure materials to give them that bright gold finish. They do the work just as well and many prefer them in their plain dress.

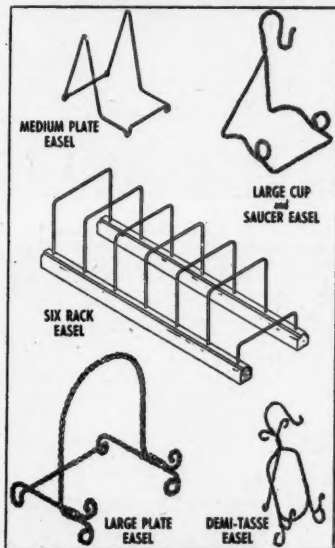

WE PAY ALL POSTAGE TO YOU. ARTICLES OF THE SAME PRICE MAY BE ASSORTED.

Dealers Attention!

Over 2000 Dealers handle these gadgets.

On orders of $5.00 or more we allow liberal discount. Write for Price List.

TERRY'S PLATE HANGERS

REGULAR HANGERS, 7-11 inch A simple little thing made of galvanized wire and a spring. Nothing exposed on front but four little tips of wire. Fits almost all plates. Can be cut down to fit real small ones but will not hold anything larger than 11 inches. A Hanger you can easily apply, and once applied, can instantly remove—on and off when desired.

Over Half Million Sold.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL

SO THAT you may know us better here at Marble Hall and know the type of fine furnishings we desire, we submit these illustrations from our large, permanent collection.

Perhaps you have something also that would go with our collection. We are interested in anything unusual, regardless of size, providing it has fine detail, color and fine craftsmanship. European pieces are mostly our desire. No more Oriental is desired at this time.

Large figurines, center pieces, clocks, vase plaques and bric-a-brac in Chelsea, French, Bisque, Dresden, Capi di Monte and the equivalent; in porcelains and in glass triple overlay, Venetian (heavily enameled), Bohemian, fine Bristols and lustres; in furniture, finely carved suites or odd pieces in rosewood and gold leaf; Florentine frames that have high relief only. Do not mend restorations. In furniture would prefer in rough.

We also want a Sterling or Duragold flatware service for 12; Harvard Aladdin student lamps (like illustration), and old red, pink, yellow shades and particularly a pair of shadow shades (colored pictures when lighted). If you have the shadow shades, name your price. You can't scare me on these. We want three more sofas that are elaborate, in medallion or camel back (high ends); must be nice ones in rough.

NOW FOR SALE in this advertisement are the large polychrome floor lamp with gold shadow velvet shade at $50. And the small beautiful flax wheel with ivory appointments at $50. Both are in good condition. The large 56" Oriental golden tan Foo dog vase with heavily applied foliage and historic scenic detail all over. It is proof and beautiful and is 28" in diameter. This is an important piece and worthy of anyone's attention at $400.

I have four very fine mirrors in various sizes for sale, very reasonable; write your desires. Now how about those French gold candelabras in December HOBBIES; will someone soon pounce upon this splendid pair at $50.

I have a nice, high wheel Bike completely reconditioned, new tires, paint and seat, ready to ride, perfect and only one at $50.

I'll buy quickly for cash with no inconvenience to you if you will only describe and sketch or photograph. And please price at your low net in the first letter. Thanks to you and to HOBBIES Staff for all the fine co-operation.

This is 14" Triple overlay, white, green, clear; beautifully executed workmanship, finely enameled floral panels, cut panels of sawtooth, fine cut prisms, perfect condition. Will sell this one for $100 or pay more for exact match.

Late Overlay: Dark blue over clear, rope arms of clear crystal as is the spike; steeple center, but balustered above base (sawtooth); fine buttons & prism drops; overlay drops, too. $100. Needs Rewiring

FOR SALE

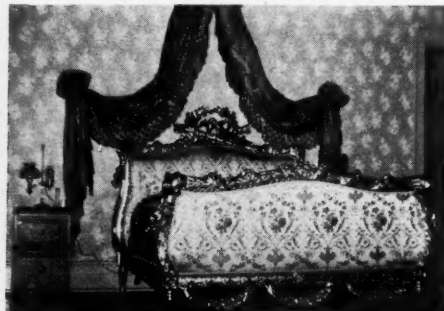

This 3-piece set of Ruby bakers, signed Italle; very light and thin, and proof condition. Historic legend scene in gold applied on all pieces; extremely reasonable at $125.
Also gold leaf curio cabinet, in Florentine mode. It is perfect and bright, and in a most desirable size at $450.

LINCOLNIANA OF TOMORROW

By BRUCE E. WHEELER

THE COLLECTOR of Lincoln items is no sinecure. Paralleling the pattern of other collectors, he is constantly on the alert to secure additional things with which to implement his store of precious possessions.

The experienced or veteran collector is familiar with the various bibliographies of Oakleaf, Booker, Monahan, and others, and, therefore, is aware of what is extant and available. He is usually a careful and discriminating person and manifests a high degree of selectivity in his acquisitions. On the other hand, the beginning or amateur collector acquires whatever comes to his attention and hopes for better luck next time. Undoubtedly, both the professional and amateur collector are anxiously awaiting the credenda of the future with reference to Lincoln fact and lore.

Regardless of the general concept held by collectors, it must be patent to the specialist that there can be no large or important addenda to Lincoln lists of Collectiana. The death of Lincoln precluded any additions to the list of holograph letters, documents, or autographed instruments of any sort. Moreover, most of these desirable items are now in libraries, museums, or in large private collections and are ultimately to become the property of some institution. It cannot be very long until it will be next to impossible for the private collector to obtain anything of a personal nature connected with Lincoln.

There is a certain constancy in the form and appearance of other items which Lincoln collectors seek. The pictures, medals, and statuary are designed from standard models and the only changes that may reasonably be expected must come as a result of new methods of reproduction or in new materials in which they are wrought. The miscellany of offerings along this line is unpredictable. A large number of buttons, calendars, and plaques are likely to be widely distributed. These inexpensive and often complimentary items are to be found in nearly all collections.

The important and far-reaching change in the Lincolniana of Tomorrow will be found to have centered itself about the printed page. Collectors of Lincoln items thus must look for variation and newness through the medium of interpretation. Obviously, the basis and foundation for future collections must necessarily consist of that which comes from the press. The writers of tomorrow will approach their subject, Lincoln, with a new viewpoint, a new philosophy, and with a more scientific method

Their interpretation of Lincoln and his day will probably be in conflict with earlier representations, but this will only mean a challenge to the most critical collector. The scholarly collector (all of us are charter members of this group) will follow with interest the method used in the preparation of a manuscript and in the conclusions drawn.

To indulge in such positive predictions with reference to future offerings in Lincoln collectibles commits one at once to the task of producing the evidence upon which such an assumption is predicted. The major premise in this particular syllogism is to be found in a rapid review of a random selection of Lincoln books covering the period between 1858 and the present time. A quick resume of a few books will enable the reader to see clearly the trend in the evolution of style, diction, philosophy, and method employed. In the following discussion, it is intended to indicate lightly the transition from the earlier biographies, based largely on tradition and personal opinion to the more recent books which are an outgrowth of the results of investigation and research. It is not possible to review the field of Lincoln literature in extenso, but the sampling here used is probably as convincing to the Lincoln student as would a careful study of the subject in toto. The simple expedient here utilized points conclusively to the fact that the type of Lincolniana predicted for tomorrow is actually with us today. Writers on Lincoln are and have for some time been using the scientific method in the preparation of Lincoln manuscripts. It is the method of today; it will most certainly be the method of tomorrow.

The earliest biographies of Lincoln were written before he became President. Obviously, the purpose was to make money and any advantage that accrued to Lincoln in his campaign was of secondary importance. In order to get the books on sale as quickly as possible, they were written hastily, without careful investigation, and with little or no editorial notice. Naturally, many errors crept into the various editions and some of them have been perpetuated by later writers. On the other hand, one cannot escape noting that the essential and important points in Lincoln's life were presented fairly well. At least, we may be assured that the writers were well pleased with their efforts. "I wrote the Life of Lincoln which elected him," was the statement of Howells to Mark Twain in 1876. Howells did not refer to the mistakes in his book which were subsequently corrected by Lincoln in Park's copy. If aware of the mistakes, Howells probably supposed that they redounded to Lincoln's benefit. Some of the errors noted refer to Lincoln's humility, unusual misfortune, or prolonged hardship. The rail-splitter candidate probably capitalized on these errors, because that combination of attributes making Lincoln the under-dog should have commanded a sizable number of votes in 1860.

After Lincoln's death, many of his intimate friends and associates began to write and publish reminiscences, personal recollections, and biographies which were based largely on tradition and personal contact. Noah Brooks, Isaac N. Arnold, and Henry J. Raymond are typical of this group of writers. They knew Lincoln personally and admired him greatly. Their product was carefully done as judged by the standard of that time, but much of their study was characterized by personal feeling and a large amount of opinionated statements. "The author of this brief biography has imperfectly carried out his purpose if he has failed to show . . . how he became the type, flower, and representative of all that is worthily American, how in him the commonest of human traits were blended with an all-embracing charity and the highest human wisdom . . . he lived unselfishly, void of selfish personal ambition . . . left a name to be remembered with love and honor as one of the best and greatest of mankind." The foregoing comment of Noah Brooks is typical of the close friends of Lincoln. In common parlance, these writers have done a good job of selling their hero to the American Public.

While other writers were collecting materials and making preparation to publish relatively small biographies of Lincoln, his secretaries, Nicolay and Hay, were more ambitious. They began early to collect materials with the avowed purpose of writing a complete historical account of Lincoln's life. In personal contact with Lincoln daily and having firsthand knowledge of all that he did and said, these writers had a vantage point not shared by others. For many years, they compiled their data, sifted their materials, reorganized and revised their work and finally published a voluminous biography. In spite of the opportunity that was theirs, potential ability, and painstaking work, it must be admitted that their contribution is disappointing and leaves much to be desired. The tendency to surround Lincoln with a halo and to shun anything that might reflect in the least on him or his family is so pronounced that the true worth of their long investigation is not brought out.

Another careful writer of the post-war period was Ida Tarbell. She visited many of the localities in which Lincoln had lived and conducted a thorough examination and investigation of his activities. Using the information she had gathered and referring to all other known sources, Miss Tarbell made an excellent compilation of her data and wrote an acceptable biography. Aside from her general biography of Lincoln, she wrote shorter sketches of his life. "He Knew Lincoln" is the story of the visit of an old Springfield friend to Washington during the administration of Lincoln. It is a human interest story told in the vernacular common to the Midwest of the Civil War period. The discourse is interspersed with a touch of the dramatic which lends zest to the natural appeal of the story. Ida Tarbell's reputation as a writer is considerably enhanced by reason of her efforts along this line. The work of Nicolay and Hay and that of Tarbell were subject to much criticism, but they were popular and were considered standard for many years. The Lincoln student of today still refers to their volumes frequently.

We are, unquestionably, more indebted to William Herndon than to any one other writer on Lincoln. Herndon was Lincoln's law partner for many years and enjoyed the same advantage for the two decades immediately preceding the war as did Nicolay and Hay during the war. However, he was more astute than Lincoln's secretaries. He knew the real Lincoln infinitely better. At the death of Lincoln, Herndon launched an extensive investigation which he continued for many years. He visited many of the scenes of Lincoln's activities, contacted many of Lincoln's friends, relatives, and acquaintances and made careful notes of all of his conferences. He corresponded with persons in Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois and often wrote several times to the same person when information was especially desired. Herndon has frequently been criticized for certain inaccuracies and for his tendency to enlarge upon his information, but the fact remains that he collected much information that might otherwise have been lost. Practically all Lincoln students and writers must lean heavily on Herndon as a source of primary information and all are anxious to delve into the original manuscript.

William Barton is probably the only important Lincoln biographer who did not have access to these papers, and, of course, he utilized Herndon's work indirectly. Dr. M. L. Houser, a prolific writer on Lincoln, has repeatedly stated that he considers Angle's edition of Herndon's

Life of Lincoln as the one book on which he can depend in all of his studies. If we discount rather liberally Herndon's tendency to color information, indulge in personal appraisal, conceive and fabricate stories about Lincoln which have little or no basis in fact, it must still be conceded that he was unusually adept in investigation. The method used by Herndon approaches rather closely that used by present day writers. The data gathered and preserved by Herndon make it possible to have a more complete account of Lincoln's life.

During the last two decades, there has been an increasing tendency among writers to shift from the tradition method of compiling the work of others to the more scientific procedure of investigation and research. Almost every phase of Lincoln's life has been subjected to microscopic scrutiny. Much of the Lincoln lore of yesterday is rejected by the ultra-scientific writer today. This is particularly true unless it is authenticated by documentary evidence. Many of the human interest stories that have woven themselves into the lives of the people have been brought under surveillance and suspicion as to their veracity. In general, we have liked to believe that Lincoln was poor and without means during the greater part of his life, but Dr. Harry Pratt has refuted that argument successfully in his book, "The Personal Finances of Abraham Lincoln." Dr. Pratt shows conclusively that Lincoln had nothing to be ashamed of from the time of birth until his death. At times, he was penniless and in debt, but usually he and his family lived well and actually he was a rich man at the time of his death. The story of Lincoln's romance with Ann Rutledge is frowned upon by some authorities. Doubtless, this is true because no written evidence is available. About all that can be said is that all efforts to suppress the story appear only to help extend and perpetuate it. Those who look askance at human relations of this sort may know all about the intricacies of research and documentary evidence, but apparently they don't know that two young people in the lonely village of New Salem during the first half of the nineteenth century would be more interested in each other than in leaving behind a body of data for research specialists to conjure with. Another case in point is the so-called "Almanac Trial." The original version is no longer accepted. It is now known that there was a moon shining when the murder took place and that Lincoln probably knew that his client, Duff Armstrong, was guilty. Thus, the tradition that Lincoln would not accept a case when he knew he was wrong can hardly be supported by the evidence.

The scientific method is exemplified by many present day writers. Baringer supports his account of the period between Lincoln's election and inauguration with an abundance of documentary evidence. Our best known Lincoln writer, Carl Sandburg, combines research with effective discourse such as one might expect from poetic genius. McMurty of Lincoln Memorial University, Monaghan, Angle, Dr. Warren, and a score of other good writers are committed to the policy of investigation and research. One of the most unusual pieces of research work is to be found in Peterson's "Lincoln-Douglas, The Weather as Destiny." In this study, great importance is attached to environment, weather, soil, and other factors in one's life. Doubtless all writers employ a dual system of preparation for writing, but it must be remembered that the present generation of authors has not seen Lincoln, consequently, the element of personal contact is no longer a factor in the preparation of a publication.

Reference has already been made to the fact that the new method is in vogue at the present time. The possibility of abandoning this type of approach is extremely remote. On the other hand, it appears feasible that the method may be extended and more widely used as time goes on. In the future, we can look forward to an ever-increasing amount of Lincoln literature predicated upon the scientific type of procedure. Investigation, research, documentary evidence, elimination, selectivity, comparison, and analysis are the tools to be used in arriving at facts and truth. Lincoln students are fast becoming Lincoln scholars. They are quick to perceive whether a story is fabricated on the basis of findings or whether it is mere opinion.

Lincoln's name and reputation is so securely anchored in American history that he will probably always be extremely popular. It does not appear, either, that there is likely to be any diminution in the number of books, articles, bulletins, and editorials during the next few years. However, it is possible that the type of writing which we may expect will appeal to a smaller group of people. As the mass of accumulating evidence depicts Lincoln as an ambitious politician and discredits some of the good qualities he was supposed to possess, the inevitable result will be a loss in human interest. The story of a poor boy who overcame all obstacles to become President and internationally known and loved will always have an appeal to large number, but as soon as the intimacy of personal contact, friendship, warmth and color are removed from the story, a relatively large amount of romance vanishes at the same time.

Perhaps many will prefer the older type of publication with its subtle form of hero worship. Lincoln's associates probably intended no deification in their generous appraisal of him, but enough experience has been brought to focus and so thoroughly organized that an unmistakable concept has been fashioned. Among many, there is, at least, a partial acceptance of the notion that Lincoln was a legendary character who lived

HISTORICAL RECORD REVIEWS

Conducted by STEPHEN FASSETT

Der Prophet—Ach, mein Sohn (Meyerbeer), and Fruhlingnacht (Schumann).

Sung by MARIANNE BRANDT. IRCC 10-inch disc, No. 225. (Re-Recordings)

The publication of Marianne Brandt recordings comes as a wonderful surprise to collectors of historic vocal records. For Brandt retired in 1890, before the practice of recording famous singers had become customary, and, although she lived on until 1921, reproductions of her voice seemed too much to expect. Nevertheless, on December 11, 1905, in Vienna, she made three wax cylinders (the third was the Trinklied from Lucrezia Borgia, number 1926), for the Pathe company, whose existence apparently was known only to a very few collectors in spite of their having been regular commercial issues. One wonders, therefore, how many other treasures remain to be discovered!

Born Mary Bischoff, at Vienna in 1842, Brandt made her debut at Graz 25 years later as a soprano. Soon, however, she was singing in Berlin as a contralto and remained a favorite there for 18 years. She was confirmed as a Wagnerian when the great Richard himself asked her to share the role of Kundry with Materna and Malten in the initial performances of Parsifal at Bayreuth. Her interpretation was much admired. But it was in the definitely contralto parts, such as Ortrud, Fricka and Erda, that she appeared most often. Her fame was by no means confined to Germany; she also sang in London, and New York was the scene of some of her greatest successes.

Brandt had a voice of unusually wide compass. According to Herman Klein, who devoted a chapter to this artist in his book Great Women Singers of My Time (Dutton, 1931), "she had the low notes of a contralto, the high notes of a soprano, and the rich, full medium of a mezzo soprano." Thus, aside from her regular contralto roles, she could easily sing the soprano music of Donna Elvira (Don Giovanni), of Leonore (Fidelio). The passing years tend to shorten a singer's voice, yet the evidence provided by these records, made when Brandt was 63 years old, suggests that even after 15 years of retirement she retained much of her original range, as well as a surprising degree of control. The extremely difficult Prophet aria is sung in magnificent style, as indeed it should have been, for Brandt was coached in this music by Pauline Viardot-Garcia, the original Fides

(Paris 1849). Here she does not sustain as long a vocal line as an ideal treatment of the music demands, but this may be due as much to the time limitations of the cylinder as to failing powers on the part of the singer. The reproduction of the voice is rather Die Meistersinger—Preislied (Wagner), and Lohengrin—Mein lieber Schwann (Wagner).

Sung by HEINRICH HENSEL. IRCC 10-inch disc, No. 227. (Re-Recordings)

Heinrich Hensel was a warmly praised tenor in his time and, since his singing is known to but few American collectors, this recording deserves special attention. As revealed by these excellent dubbings from original Odeon discs, his voice is an unusual one, both robust and lyric in quality. His rendition of the Prize Song is especially good, but I care less for the Lohengrin side. (Incidentally, improved results will be obtained if these records are played at 76 instead of the usual 78 r.p.m.)

Hensel was born in Neustadt, Octouneven and not comparable to the best commercial standards of the time. Occasionally the level or surface noise almost covers the voice. Much better mechanically is the other side, the Schumann song, a recording which conveys unmistakably the impression that Brandt was a thrilling singer, with a firm bright tone and an impassioned style. If not suited to the casual listener, IRCC No. 225 has more to recommend it than mere historical interest, and collectors owe a special vote of thanks to Mr. E. C. Winer, who lent the original cylinders to IRCC. (As listed in an old Pathe catalog, the number of Fruhlingnacht was 19259, of the Prophet aria, 19260.)

ber 29, 1847, studied in Vienna and Milan, and made his debut at Freiburg in 1897. He became famous in Germany and in 1910 was chosen to sing Parsifal at Bayreuth. The next year he won enthusiastic reviews from critics who heard him at Covent Garden (London) and at our own Metropolitan. From 1911 to 1922 he sang regularly at Hamburg, where he died on February 23, 1935. Aside from a series of Odeon records, he also made cylinders and discs for Edison. Several of the latter were issued here but are rather rare today.

Semiramide—Bel raggio (Rossini), and Gioconda—Suicidio (Ponchielli).

Sung by CELESTINA BONINSEGNA. CRS 12-inch disc, No. 12. (Re-Recordings)

Aida—Celeste Aida (Verdi), and Tosca—E lucevan le stelle (Puccini).

Sung by JOHN McCORMACK. CRS 12-inch disc, No. 11.

I choose to review these two recordings together because they are issued by the same store, re-recorded by means of an improved technique, and pressed on the new unbreakable vinyl-plastic material. In each of these dubbings, the voice sounds as forward, brilliant and full in tone as it does in the original but, at the same time, surface noise has been reduced to a remarkable degree. The new material is smoother than the old and I am given to understand that, if your pickup is not too heavy, it will wear well.

The Columbia originals of the Boninsegna titles were made in 1919. They represent two aspects of this exciting singer at her best: dramatic coloratura in the once-famous Rossini air and dramatic-without-coloratura in Suicidio. In the latter aria, Boninsegna's celebrated chest tones are heard with thrilling effect, but she sings both selections magnificently. Highly recommended.

These examples of McCormack's operatic singing were taken from Odeon originals made about 1908, when the young tenor was striving to sing in a more frankly Italianate manner than he ever displayed in his maturity, and thus they give valuable insight into his artistic development. His Celeste Aida is more robustly sung than I expected it to be (he never sang the role of Rhadames), and it is an excellent performance. McCormack did sing Cavaradossi (Tosca) in this aria, and too, his style is surprisingly Italianate and dramatic. Knowing what was to come later, one can listen to his vocal recklessness with understanding, even approval, rather than alarm. Although it was as a singer of Mozart and of the Italian composers of the bel canto period that McCormack excelled as an operatic artist, this record should be heard by all his admirers.

Andre Bauge Still Alive

In his article in the December 1945 issue of HOBBIES, Leo Riemens reported that this fine French baritone had been killed in an air raid. More recently, however, Leo was informed by Aline Vallandri, the Pathé soprano, that Bauge had not been killed after all, though his house in Paris was destroyed. Bauge, incidentally, is the son of the operetta star, Tariol-Bauge, whose records are known to American collectors. André himself recorded accoustically for HMV and later made a series of electrics for Pathé. Like his mother, he has appeared in operetta, but has sung also at the Opera Comique. During the first world war he was decorated for bravery in action, and was later elected President of the Société des Artistes Ancien Combattants. Some years ago, one of Bauge's Pathé's won a prize and was later issued here by Columbia: Plaisir d'Amour (Martin) and Romance du Bard from Ariodante (Mehul), number P-9155-M. This recording reveals a light voice of considerable charm and, while his rendition of Plaisir d'Amour is not on a par with Gilbert's it is nevertheless very good. In the lovely Ariodante air, he is heard to better advantage, for unfamiliar music and sensitive singing combine to make this an extremely attractive recording.

Favorite Pioneer Recording Artists

Edward Warren Meeker. 1.

By ULYSSES ("JIM") WALSH

Although Edward Warren Meeker won just fame as a Favorite Pioneer Recording Artist, his recorded voice also was heard by millions of people who had no idea who he was.

Mr. Meeker, who died aged 63, on April 19, 1937, at his home in Orange, N. J., had several other distinctions, but in this respect of being a "mystery man" whose voice was heard throughout the world he was almost unique.

The mystery, however, is easily explained. Besides an accomplished comedian, specialization in Irish comic songs and Negro dialect specialties and making many records under his own name, Mr. Meeker was for years the Edison company's "announcer."

From the beginning of the phonograph business until 1908 or 1909, it was the custom of most companies to have a recorded musical selection prefaced by a spoken announcement, like this:

"Rainbow." Indian Love Song. Sung by Ada Jones and Billy Murray. Ed-i-SON rec-CORD!" It was Ed Meeker who, during the last several years of the announcement custom, gave the preliminary information on many hundreds of records, regardless of by whom the Edison cylinder was sung or played.

Even after the announcements, which had been originally used to prevent unscrupulous persons from duplicating and re-selling standard brands of records had been done away with, Meeker remained for many years as an Edison staff artist, whose versatility, ingenuity and powers of mimicry were greatly appreciated.

EDWARD MEEKER

During his entire career, the comedian's activities were restricted, to an almost unparalleled extent, in favor of just one recording career—Edison. In 1909, he made one Victor record, an amusing rendition of Jean Havez's "coon song," "Broke," which appeared on the back of a Billy Murray rendition of "Gee, I Wish I Had a Girl." The number was 16291. Aside from that solitary exception, Meeker never, so far as I have been able to learn, sang for any company but Edison, and I have long wondered how it happened that he made that one lone Victor record.

How did Ed Meeker get his start with Edison in the first place? According to what "Bill" Hays, a veteran Edison recording expert who is still on the job for Thomas A. Edison, Inc., told John L. Norton, Sr., of the Woodymay Record Company, Meeker's engagement as an announcer was caused by the discovery that he had a robust voice which did not in the least live up to his inappropriate last name. To quote Mr. Norton's account of what Mr. Hays told him:

"Ed Meeker was a workman at the Edison plant. One day he was painting window casings near the recording room and carrying on a conversation with another workman in a very loud voice. They needed someone for an announcer, as Collins (Arthur Collins, the 'Preacher and the Bear' singer who had been doing announcing for Edison) wasn't always available, so they brought Meeker in, gave him a few tests and his laborious days were over. Meeker died . . . of ulcers of the stomach."

A brief summary of Mr. Meeker's career, printed in a New York newspaper on the day after his death, may be quoted here. It incorrectly gives his first name as Edwin:

"Edwin Warren Meeker, announcer whose voice was familiar in thousands of American homes long before the

The Curious History of Music Boxes

By Mosoriak & Heckert

The story of automatic musical instruments, from their earliest conception down through the years to the invention of the phonograph, is authentically traced in this unusual book, that contains the description and interesting historical background of music boxes of all types; and illustrates many of the rarest examples. Some of these took strange shapes, such as the butterfly music box, or the musical pistol, and many others, and are pictured for the first time in this limited edition, which also includes a section on dawn of radio, died yesterday at his home, 195 Main Street, Orange. He was 63.

"Phonograph records made by the Edison Co. were his medium. It was his voice, when recording was in its infancy, that spoke the closing words of each disc: 'This is an Edison record.'"

"A Spanish-American War veteran and a former minstrel trouper, Mr. Meeker was associated with the Edison Co. for 35 years, both as a singer and an announcer.

"A native of Orange, he was the son of Enoch Meeker, noted in that city as the tallest policeman in its history.

"Mr. Meeker made his stage debut with Miller's Twentieth Century Minstrels and later toured with Hoyt's Minstrels. In the World War he was an entertainer at Camp Dix.

"His greatest thrill, he once said, was the privilege of giving a song recital before Thomas A. Edison on the inventor's 75th birthday.

"Recently, he had appeared as a singer and entertainer in night clubs.

"Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Margaret T. Meeker; a son, Frank, and a daughter, Mrs. Madeline Brown, all of Orange.

"Funeral service will be held today at 10 a. m. in St. John's Roman Catholic Church. Burial will be in St. John's Cemetery, Orange."

The foregoing newspaper "story" contains some inaccuracies. Announcements, which were finally done away with because customers complained, with little justification, that they took up too much space which might be devoted to music, were not made on Edison discs, but on cylinders, and they were at the beginning, instead of the end, of the record. The announcer did not say, "This is an Edison record."

Mrs. Meeker, who says her husband was born January 22, 1874, told me he was associated with Edison as an announcer and singer for 32 years, retiring only because of poor health.

He may have been used as an announcer for a considerable time before his talents were utilized as a recording artist, but the first yearly Edison record catalog I have in which Meeker records are listed is one issued in April, 1907.

Judging by the numbers of the comparatively few Meeker records on sale in 1907, the announcer-comedian's first solo cylinder was 9234, "What's the Use of Knocking When a Man is Down?" This must have been made early in 1906.

Other Meeker solos were: 9526, "Do, Re, Mi, Fa, Sol, La, Si, Do"; 9310, "Good-Bye, Mr. Greenback"; and 9402, "Song of the Nations," in which he announced "Wacht am Rhein," "Wearing of the Green," and "The Red, White and Blue," whistled by Joe Belmont.

In addition, he participated in one vocal trio record made early in 1907, No. 9471, "Whistle It" from Victor Herbert's sensationally successful opera, "The Red Mill." Billy Murray and Helen Trix were the other trio members.

This reminds me of the fact that Meeker was something of a "lone wolf" during his recording career. Except in descriptive specialities, he was seldom called on to team up with other artists. I can think of only one duet in which he took part—"Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean," which he and Steve Porter sang on Edison discs and cylinders in 1922. It was a much better interpretation than the one sung for Victor by the original Gallagher and Shean themselves.

The first record I ever heard by Edward Meeker was listened to when I was a very small boy indeed and was an Edison cylinder rendition of Raymond Brown's one-time well-known "coon shout," "I Wish't I Was in Heaven Sittin' Down." The ditty told of the colored hero's desire to be where he would be perfectly happy, "with old St. Peter handin' me a crown," and I was charmed with the singer's gusto and ability to be highly amusing.

CIRCUS CLOWNS ARE ACTOR'S HOBBY

By A. MORTON SMITH

CIRCUS CLOWNS and their antics appeal so much to Joseph Cotten, the motion picture actor of note, that his hobby is collecting photographs, paintings, etchings and figures of clowns.

He has some 300 items in his collection which is displayed in the circus room of his home in Pacific Palisades, California. And he has made an extensive study of clowns and clownship from the earliest days of the jester in theatrical exhibitions.

It all started when Cotten as a youngster, went to the circus and stared with wide-eyed amazement and ecstasy at the multitudinous rings with their displays of versatility in gymnastic and equilibristic arts by men and women in leopards, tarlatan skirts and pink tights.

But the funny fellows with painted faces and ill fitting clothes who caricatured public figures and made hilariously funny the commonplace situations and events they burlesqued, captivated the lad.

Joseph Cotten didn't realize his burning ambition to earn through the jockey's antics the acclaim and guffaws of thousands in big top audiences, but he did become a great motion picture artist who enjoys the esteem of millions of cinema patrons through his appearances in such pictures as "Since You Went Away," "Gaslight," and "Duel in the Sun."

"Some of us never outgrow the desire to be a circus performer," Cotten explains his successful career in the amusement field. "I imagine that is the reason why some people become actors. Everybody really wants to be an actor. Some of us just keep on trying until we are accepted."

Cotten's collection of clowns dates back to his childhood days. For in the cupboard which contains the clown figures, he points out several well preserved clown toys, including mechanical clown banks.

But his serious interest in collecting clown material goes back 10 years, and was prompted by that childhood ambition to be a circus clown, still in the back of his mind.

He and Norman Foster decided to write a movie scenario about the circus, which eventually narrowed itself down to the tale of a clown. Cotten, of course, was to play the role of the harlequin. To obtain background for the script, he did a considerable amount of serious research into the history and art of clowning.

This investigation whetted the actor's collecting instinct and his hobby of clowns—the only one he has, he declares—is the outcome.

Among the outstanding pieces in the collection are paintings of famous clowns by such artists as Everett Shinn, John Decker, Ludwig Bemelmans and Lenard Kester. And there are etchings of jockeys by Watteau and Dame Laura Knight.

The art of the old time circus lithographer is represented by a number of multi-colored posters of circus clowns dating back to the 90's and the golden age of circuses.

Then there are numerous photographs of clowns of the 20th Century, some of which are framed and adorn the walls of his den, while others are kept in king-size albums.

The only exception to his specialization in the circus, is a group of some 50 colored drawings of the Comedia Dell 'Arte by Maurice Sand, used to illustrate several volumes on the Italian thespians of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries, which Sand wrote.

The Comedia Dell 'Arte, however, has had a definite influence on circus clown acts, makeup and costuming down through the years, as well as in other fields of entertainment, particularly opera, ballet and other classical forms of the drama.

Asked his favorite clowns, Cotten unhesitatingly declares Charles Chaplin, originally of the English music halls, who won world-wide acclaim in the early days of the movies, is the No. 1 comedian. Jimmy Durante and Jimmy Savo are also high on his list.

Among circus clowns, Cotten hands the laurels to Emmett Kelly, the sad-faced tramp comic of cabbage nibbling fame in Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus, whose artistry has been given recognition by the show as has been accorded no comedian of the sawdust realm since the days of Dan Rice, the clown who owned his own circus, and who aspired to be president of the United States.

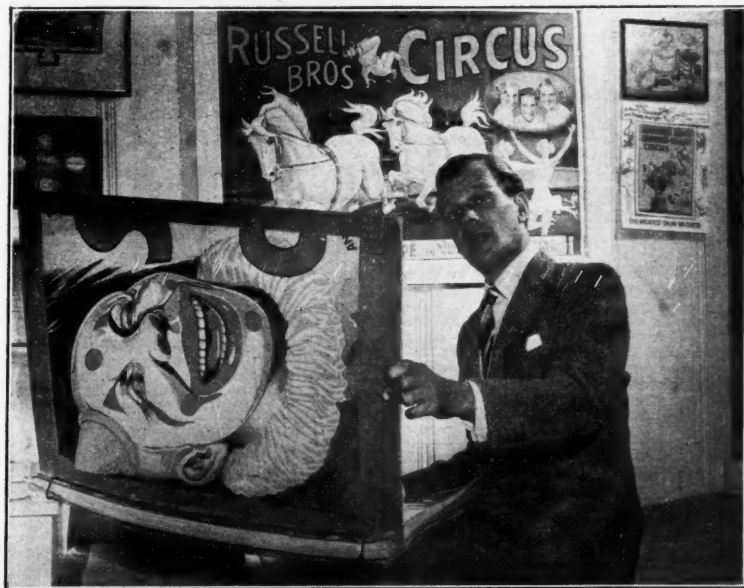

Cotten still hasn't realized his ambition to play the part of a clown in the movies, on the stage or in radio. He does not know any of the prominent circus clowns personally, and has never donned clown white and costume for "guest" appearances with shows as have many circus fans for whom clowning is a hobby.

LITERARY PRINTS

By JOHN RAMSAY

Our American lithographs reflect the daily life and interests of our ancestors to a surprisingly full extent. Among the thousands of titles, only a few not very important ones show "literary" subjects and yet these few, taken together, give a very clear idea of what Mid-Nineteenth Century Americans liked to read. Not unexpectedly, the classics are hardly represented. "Midsummer Night's Dream" is the title of a fine large folio print by Currier & Ives, and

"Hamlet" is an "art study" by C. H. Crosby, but Shakespeare is otherwise slighted. The New England writers do appear, but other important Americans, Poe, Whitman, Melville and others, are not in the catalogue, and Mark Twain receives only casual recognition in a picture of "The Quaker City, the Ship that Took the Innocents Abroad."

Portraits of writers are few. The Armstrong Lithograph Company of Boston issued in 1888 large folio tinted busts of William Cullen Bryant, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and other eminent New Englanders which, at a guess, were intended for the walls of school rooms and libraries rather than homes. Otherwise, on the evidence of lithographs, the favorite writers of middle-class Americans during the first half of the nineteenth century were the romantic British poets, Byron and Burns. Robert Burns is shown in four prints by N. Currier and Currier & Ives, once with his Highland Mary, also by Charles Currier, Sarony & Major and two Kellogg partnerships, and even in a late large folio by Kurtz & Allison of Chicago about 1890. And Currier & Ives add a scarce medium folio "The Banks of Doon, Burns Monument" by Fanny Palmer, who may have seen the place before she came to this country.

George Gordon Lord Byron seems to have been even more popular. There is a fine bust of him by Rembrandt Peale, lithographed by Pendleton about 1830, another of the same period by Anthony Imbert of New York, and an anonymous one, distinctly primitive in style. Currier & Ives later issued three fanciful and romantic portraits of the poet and a "Residence of Lord Byron," and Sarony & Major a "Byron's First Love" which was evidently so popular that two slightly different versions are known. The third British romantic, Sir Walter Scott was, for some reason, not pictured, but Currier & Ives and Kelloggs & Thayer both show "The Lady of the Lake," and Currier & Ives a "Trial of Effie Deans" from his "Heart of Midlothian." Currier also pictured Charles Dickens as "Boz," possibly as a souvenir of his trip to America in 1842. And there are three Currier prints illustrating Tennyson's "Enoch Arden."

Among American writers, Washington Irving comes first in number of subjects, starting with a small folio portrait of "Washington Irving, Esq." by Pendleton, and an interesting view of "The Irving Dinner at the City Hall, May 30, 1832" by Endicott & Swett. But Currier & Ives' three views of "Sunnyside, Residence of Washington Irving," with one by Buford "Van Tassell House, Residence of Washington Irving" and the former's two views of Sleepy Hollow are probably included among the many and popular Hudson River scenes rather than as mementos of Irving. Later, the tremendous popularity of Harriet Beecher Stow's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" evoked a number of prints illustrating it, Currier's dramatic "Flight of Eliza," and "Uncle Tom," a good "Uncle Tom and Little Eva" by E. B. & E. C. Kellogg, a better unsigned one, and two "Views From Uncle Tom's Cabin" by T. W. Strong. Also, the first edition of Bret Harte's famous "The Heathen Chinese" appeared in 1870 on nine lithographed cards, advertising Sapolio which cannot be included among "framing prints."

Other American authors whose works were illustrated by lithographs include, naturally, Longfellow. There is a series of three fine large folio "Hiawatha" prints by Currier & Ives, issued between 1858 and 1866, not together. There is a fine large "Home of Evangeline" by Fanny Palmer and a "Wayside Inn," also large folio and fine. John Howard Payne's "Home Sweet Home" was naturally shown, three times in different sizes by the Currier house, and in three later chromolithographs. Moore's "Old Oaken Bucket" appears in four Currier prints, one by E. B. & E. C. Kellogg, and three chromes. Finally, C. W. Holmes' "Deacon Jones' One-Hoss Shay" inspired a good pair of large folio horse comics by Currier & Ives and a similar pair by George H. Walker & Company of Boston, which was copied by White, Piplar & Company in 1880.

This short outline misses some more or less "literary" titles, and there are probably more unknown to the writer. Certainly such popular Nineteenth Century writers as Mrs. Hemans, Thomas Moore, William Gilmore Sims, Cooper and Hawthorne are strangely missing. So it cannot be taken as a serious study of the literary taste of the period. But it does give the collector of American lithographs an unexpected field to investigate.

Treasures Come

Out of Hiding

With the complete cessation of hostilities, and the return of peace to the European continent, one wonders how successful the authorities have been in their task of returning to various places the many valuable art treasures discovered by the American 1st Army.

The cache, which had been moved from place to place as the Allies advanced, and which was finally overrun before it could have been moved again, include many works of Rembrandt, Rubens, Van Gogh and Van Dyke; the famous jeweled and gold sarcophagus from the Cathedral of Cologne, sculptures and other treasures from museums, cathedrals and private collections. There were 500 original scores in the handwriting of the composer Beethoven, taken from his birthplace at Bonn. The Germans had even managed to take away the bones of Charlemagne from their resting place in the Aachen cathedral.

The famous state "Victory of Samthrace" has been returned to the Louvre after remaining in hiding in an air-raid shelter of Chateau Valencay since 1939.

Murillo Masterpiece

One of the most famous Murillo paintings in existence, the "Virgin and Child," at one time rumored to have cost a million dollars, is now the possession of the New York Metropolitan Museum.

The history of this painting dis-closes that it first came to England in 1809 from Spain, when the latter country was being overrun by the armies of Napoleon. After a few changes of ownership, the painting became the property of Lord Overstone, in 1825, in whose family it remained from generation to generation, until its recent acquisition by the Metropolitan Museum.

The painting itself is considered to be one of the finest Murillo pictures in America. Murillo was born in 1617 of humble parentage in Seville. He first gained recognition painting at the public fair in Seville, and later he studied in Italy and Flanders as a protegee of Velazquez.

CYCLING FOOLS

By D. TUDOR HARRELL

CYCLING DOWN the Capitol steps at Washington is a tolerably dangerous ride and for the few individuals who have succeeded, it is indeed something to be cock-a-hoop over. There are two frontages to this building, known as the "east" and "west" fronts.

In 1885, William F. Robertson, champion rider of district wheelmen selected the "east" side, consisting of 42 steps, each ten inches wide and eight inches deep, for his perilous ride. All sorts of difficulties stood in the way of accomplishing his purpose, as authorities, due to the great risk involved, had refused him permission.

In spite of this, however, Robertson, determined to ride, successfully, took a chance early one morning in the presence of a few friends and a camera man, riding an old-fashioned "Star" machine, with the small wheel in front.

On April 1, 1897, William Shields, who, traveling under the name of "Rube" had won for himself a wide reputation as a trick rider, prepared to descend the "east" front. These 74 steps are broken at intervals by three landings, the middle one being 20 feet in width and the other two ten feet each.

With a vast deal of patience he practiced on the steep flight of another government building with no landings to pitch him off. Then on All-Fools Day, when the watchman was elsewhere, with a few of his friends and a photographer he made ready. Motionless and without a sound, he poised his wheel on the edge of the steep incline, sprang into the saddle and was off. On the top flight his pedals flew off, and he was unable to retrieve them; he gripped the handle-bars tighter, fastened his eyes straight ahead on the steps ahead and sped downward like the wind.

As he reached the last landing he had acquired so much speed the wheel leaped over the last 16 steps at one bound and crashed in a heap at the bottom. Luckily Shields escaped without a scratch, his daringly original feat accomplished, and the only damage to his wheel was a twisted handle-bar.

Another of this fellow's remarkable descents was at Cincinnati, Ohio, where he rode down a ladder from a second story window at a 60 degree angle, 24 feet above the pavement. Again, on this trip, he crashed against the curb but in a second was on his feet, unharmed.

The first man to descend the Capitol steps on a "safety" was Charles Kilpatrick, celebrated one-legged cyclist. Many interesting stories are told of the sheer lunacy and daring of this rider, who depended solely on the steady pressure of his solitary leg on the very long crank of his machine. On one occasion, again at Cincinnati, while he was preparing to ride down a steep flight of wooden stairs, 60 feet high, fixed at an alarming angle, his helper fumbled with the wheel while he was mounting, and the next second Kilpatrick was dashed down the stairs at a terrific speed. His machine was smashed to pieces, but "Kil" escaped with only a nasty shaking-up. His photographer, who was changing plates at the time, spent some time in the hospital.

Another time when he was in South Africa, doing a bicycle act with a circus, he balanced himself on one of the elephant's heads, then asked the trainer to show the wheel to "Old Ben." The animal looked it over well, and the story goes that from that time on, when "Kil" was ready for his act, the elephant would go to the rack, pick out his wheel, and hand it to him, with joyous trump.

"There are more than six hundred automobiles in California, two-thirds of which are operated in San Francisco, according to the San Francisco trade journal. Both steam and gasoline vehicles are made in San Francisco, but no electrics. Orders for vehicles come to San Francisco from Texas, Nevada, Arizona, Oregon, Washington, Wyoming, the Hawaiian Islands, Australia, and New Zealand. Society in the Golden Gate has taken to the automobile with the same spirit shown in the East. The San Francisco Automobile Club has a membership of two hundred."—Automobile Trade Journal, Aug. 1902.

Letters of the Famous

John Greenleaf Whittier
Loves a Cat

This letter by Whittier was recently listed by one of the dealers in autographs. (The spelling is Whittier's): "Oak Knoll, Danvers, 19th, 7, 1877 Dear Friend P.

"So then my old tawny-hided friend is no more. We could have better spared a better cat. I hope you buried him on his back with his paws folded in his old way. Requiescat in space. I'm sorry.

"Perhaps it would do you all good to try a change of mountain or sea. I hope it won't prevent your visit to us in the fall. Tell Lizzie that I had to answer a thousand and one questions about the baby. Mariana Danhurst is very sick, but they hope a trifle better. Jettie Menilo day before yesterday came near a serious accident. Her horse ran away with her at the Village, struck Daniel Bagley's fence and corner tree, smashed the carriage & flung Jettie out on the sidewalk. She was much bruised & broken, but no bones broken. I saw her next morning; she was very lame, bruised & sore all over like Sancho Panga after he was tossed in the blanket, but very thankful it was no worse. All the folks here send love. I have been to A. & Hampton Beach & came back here on Third day. With love to Lizzie & her family.

Affectionately

"JOHN G. WHITTIER.

"Abby says 'Don't take the baby too far from home.'"

Another Whittier Letter

"Oak Knoll II, 14th

"Dear Pickard

"I was glad to get thy letter; and hope Lizzie will slowly but surely get up. I am glad Addie Calwell has been to see you.

"I enclose in this a note for Charley directing him to pay thee for books which he thought he needed & enclosing check for same. I hope he means business & not play.

"Maine did nobly on the Presidential vote. I think Garfield will know how to keep in popularity. He is a cool, wise, honest man.

"Tell Lizzie that Bagerton has written me saying he is done with politics. He feels rotten sore about his defeat, but I told him I had been in the same predicament as a Free Soil candidate for Congress, & got abused more than he did for I was charged with ill-treating my wife!

"I shall write Lizzie soon. With love, your

MUSEUM IN OLD MONTEREY

MONTEREY, romantic capital of Old California from 1776 to the end of 1849—and de facto from 1770 to 1776—was the political and social center of the vast empire of Spain and of Mexico that stretched from the Rockies to the Pacific and from the Oregon line to the Rio Grande and the Gila.

Though many interesting buildings from colonial days have disappeared, more have survived than in any other city in the Far West—a half-hundred, many surrounded by their old gardens. Thus Old Monterey "Where America Began in the West" takes on the aspect of a national monument.

The Chamber of Commerce Building on the site of "The First American Capitol West of the Rockies"—El Cuartel—is a logical point from which the traveler may begin a tour of the outstanding landmarks of the Old Capitol.

Among the historic spots is the building traditionally known as Fremont's headquarters. It is adobe enclosed in frame. As Fremont slept on a hill at the end of town with his command—he says so himself—the adobe may have served for an office for the brief time he remained in Monterey.

The Stokes House with its towering eucalypti and old garden, is one of the distinguished old adobes of the brave, gay days when California was young. Built in the '30's by Dr. Stokes, it was the scene of many early balls.

Another building known as Sherman's Quarters takes its name from the fact that it was here that General William Tecumseh Sherman lived while serving Colonel Richard D. Mason, military governor of California, as adjutant-general. General Henry W. H. Halleck occupied a log cabin nearby.

But as this is the museum department of HOBBIES, we are more concerned with Colton Hall, which has lately been turned into a public museum. It was ready for occupancy in the spring of 1849, having been built by the Rev. Walter Colton, Yankee alcalde, from the proceeds of fines of gamblers and wine-bibbers, together with the proceeds of sales of town lots. It was originally designed for a meeting-place and for school purposes. Here it was that the first constitution of California was written—September to October, '49.

And if one does not find enough of the west in the museum there is "The Whaling Station," which was built in the '60s. The Customs house, the oldest government building in the State (it was started by Spain in 1814), stands as mute testimony to the changing of governments. It has known three flags—Spain, Mexico and the United States.

The old French Hotel, now known as the Robert Louis Stevenson House, was occupied by the illustrious author in 1879. It was here in a room on the second floor, facing the west, that Stevenson wrote "Vendetta of the West," essay on "Thoreau," and blocked out his "Amateur Emigrant" and "Prince Otto."

Monterey has many relics and the traveler to this city will find its buildings well identified by markers supplied by the Monterey History and Art Association.

State Memorial

A 125-year old structure located at Gallipolis, Ohio, recently became the 46th site added to the state's memorials. The house that has served as a residence, tavern and museum was donated to the state Archaeological and Historical Society by Dr. Charles E. Holzer.

The institution will continue to be known as "Our House," the name it has had since it was built as a tavern in 1819 by Alonzo Cushing. One of its most distinguished visitors was Gen. Lafayette, who stopped there in 1825. Among the relics in the museum is a satin suit worn by the general at court in France.

The two-story brick structure has an attic where small items are exhibited. A ballroom and a Lafayette bedroom are on the second floor.

Rosicrucian Museum

The Rosicrucian Egyptian and Oriental Museum, San Jose, Calif., is said to be one the largest in the Western United States devoted to Egyptian antiquities. It contains a collection of several thousand exhibits from all parts of the Orient and from interesting centers of ancient civilizations. The exhibits consist of Egyptian mummies of human beings, animals, and birds; statuary, jewelry, utensils, clothing, and works of art of vanished races. The Museum also contains the only full-sized exact reproduction of an ancient Egyptian rock tomb to be seen in America—such a tomb as one sees in the sandstone cliffs on the West bank of the Upper Nile. Its collection has been secured from leading museums of the world. Models of the Great Pyramid, King Tutankhamen's tomb and other objects of historical importance are there to enchant the visitor.

MEMORIES CORNER

Nostalgia

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody good."

If it were not for the war-time paper shortage, taking magazines of your type off the newsstands, I would have missed a very interesting experience, and one which afforded me considerable pleasure.

From time to time, it is my custom to pick up back copies of HOBBIES and yesterday, looking through what was offered, I found the June, 1941, issue was the latest. So I bought it, took it home, and sat down to enjoy it.

And there, on the cover page, looking as lifelike as if I were right there on the spot, was the Old Friends Church, in Richmond, Ind. (Wayne County Historical Museum to you!).

It is still the Friends' church in my memory, for it has not been so many years since it was in use. One of my experiences in Richmond, in the early Twenties, was to attend services at this church, when its severe, straight backed wooden pews were still in use. It frequently was the scene of state and national meetings of the Friends movement in Indiana.

Mrs. W. W. Gaar, to whom credit must be given for the development of this project, is a member of a family whose history is intimately connected with the development of the Middle West. Thousands of mid-western families were familiar with the Gaar-Scott threshing machines made in Richmond, and in the minds of HOBBIES readers, they will be interwoven with memories of the old-fashioned threshing dinners, with their displays of cut glass, four kinds of meat, and plenty of pie when the neighborhood crew sat down at noon to prepare for a strenuous afternoon in the fields.

The Wayne County collection probably is the most extensive in Indiana, outside of Indianapolis, and is approached by the very interesting display at Kokomo, Ind., where one of the early Elwood Haynes cars is on display, or, at least, it was when I was in that part of the country.

Indiana passed a law encouraging county museums some time ago, with the result that much pioneer lore is being preserved.

There is another interesting phase of this picture. In the left hand corner can be seen the front of the costly Reid Memorial Church, built of Bedford Limestone by the late Daniel G. Reid of New York. This church, with its $50,000 pipe organ and beautiful interior decorations, sets a standard for structures of this type in that part of the middle west.

Richmond was the home of the Reid-Leeds families, who built up large fortunes through the tin plate industry and the tariffs protecting same, in that period of the early 1900's when industry and industrial tycoons were riding high.

The museum is located in the midst of an interesting part of the city, one of the early residential districts where the "best families" were situated. One block west of the church, back of the museum, is the old home of the Jay Sisters, where the writer stayed for a year. They still used "thee" and "thou" in casual conversation.

Another home of interest to HOBBIES readers lying across the street to the east was the Frank Lackey residence, where one of the finest collections of glass in the Middle West was situated. The collection was sold out only a few years ago, following the death of its owner.

Richmond is a city unusually rich in tradition. It was a "port of entry" for the great tide of western immigration which flowed over the Old National Road in the early 1800's and the architectural influence of the eastern states may be seen not only there but in the adjoining towns to the west, Centerville, Cambridge City, and Dublin, where houses are built directly on the sidewalks, scorning the device of a lawn to insure privacy to the occupants. Over this old road passed the stage coaches carrying mail and notables in the western hinterland. President Van Buren is said to have been forced to spend the night a few miles west of Richmond when the coach stuck in the mud.

So much for my recollections of Wayne county. It is for the traditions of these days that the Wayne County Historical Museum and others like it, have been established. Let us hope that the memories of these older days, with their overtones of joy and tragedy, will become clearer with the passage of the years, instead of fading into dust.

R. G. Tilton, Los Angeles.

oOo

O. Henry's old Austin, Texas, home has had many thousands of visitors since it was opened as a museum in 1934, according to a report by Curator Cornelia Cooke Smith.

War Mementoes

Personal mementoes from Adolph Hitler's private apartment in his Berchtesgaden retreat were recently placed on display in the Chicago Historical Society. The articles were rescued from the burning building by Corp. Robert T. Isham of Lake Forest, Illinois, and have been lent by him to the Society for a limited period.

Corp. Isham, of the 693 Field Artillery Battalion, was one of the first American soldiers to enter Berchtesgaden in early May of this year. By that time the mountain retreat had been badly battered by Allied bombings. The articles placed on display at the Historical Society were found in Hitler's apartment 150 feet underground.

The collection includes silverware, napkins, a tablecloth, beer stein coasters, and dishcloths, all monogrammed "AH"; several of Hitler's personal Christmas cards with his signature; and a Berchtesgaden telephone list with air raid instructions.

Stories of the Sea

Cape Hatteras, N. C.: Caribbean storms have lifted the curtain on hundreds of tragedies which were played out on those lonely beaches of the Outer Banks in the past three centuries—but as usual, it is a fleeting show. Sand swept away by tides is drifting back with the mild southwest winds, and before long most of the exposed wrecks will be hidden again.

This picture shows a room in the house that shipwrecks furnished. It is the home of Mrs. George Hollowell's at Nag's Head, N. C., which was furnished almost entirely with articles recovered from shipwrecks, bought at "vendues" or from people who found them on the beach.

Ann Thomas, radio and screen star, stopped at HOBBIES office recently, on her return to New York from Hollywood where she took a part in the cast of Duffy's Tavern. Miss Thomas has a large collection of dolls, and as she tours about the country relaxes by hunting out new dolls for her collection and meeting doll collectors. Miss Thomas, promised that as soon as work eased up for her a bit, she would make some reports of her experiences in collecting for these pages.

Goodwill Dolls

The news item in the September HOBBIES on the "Swimming Doll" has brought a response from the Goodwill Industries of San Diego County, California. Olin W. Gillespie, manager, writes to tell us that their organization has in its doll museum a "swimming doll exactly as described. This doll is not for sale, but maintained as part of our exhibit."

Mr. Gillespie further states that the Industries has just completed their annual doll show. Close to 500 different dolls were exhibited free to the public. The show, an annual feature of the San Diego Goodwill for the last ten years, contained many interesting wax, parians, papier-mache, china and bisque specimens. An interesting group consisted of a doll representing each Goodwill in the country, thereby constituting more or less an historical study of early American made dolls.

EAGLES—ALL BUT ONE

By DOROTHY FOSTER BROWN

THE COURAGEOUS collector who specializes in Eagles is not so limited as at first appears. For while the subject is a restricted one, it lends itself to much versatility of treatment. In fact, there are so many different Eagle buttons that it is sometimes difficult to find two that are alike—unless you take them from the same uniform, at the same time.

Eagles do occur on Costume buttons, but it is on Uniforms that they really come into their own. So the eagle-fanciers become, willy-nilly, collectors of Uniform buttons, also.

United States buttons alone can supply enough Eagles to keep a collector busy. They are found on all sorts of official and semi-official uniforms: Army, Navy, Marines, Customs, Revenue Service, Militias, etc., etc. They are also found on buttons of the Confederacy, and on many State buttons, including New York, Pennsylvania, New Mexico, Illinois, Arkansas, Mississippi, Michigan, Maryland and Oregon. They decorate Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, and show up here and there on miscellaneous Uniform and Regalia buttons of many kinds.

No. 1. No Eagle group would be complete without this design, called by Captain Emilio "The Eagle." It was in use, with variations, between 1812 and 1902, and is one of the best designed of United States buttons. This particular specimen is an Army Artillery button of 1832-36 (Emilio—112); one-piece, convex gilt with raised design. Reverse: "Robinsons Extra."

No. 2 is a British Livery button: one-piece, silvered, slightly convex. Reverse: "Firmin-London & Birmingham." Eagles are not plentiful on British Military buttons, but are often found on Liveries.

No. 3 shows an Eagle-on-Fieldpiece,—a flat brass button of the United States Army, Artillery. 1820-40 (?) Reverse: "Scovills & Co.—Waterbury."

No. 4. The Polish Eagle is displayed in relief on this convex brass button. Reverse: "M. C. Lilley & Co.—Columbus." This Eagle appears often on stamps of Poland, since 1918. (Stamps and stamp catalogues are a great help in the identification of foreign Uniform buttons.)

No. 5. This is a button of the Royal Air Force,—the "few to whom so many owe so much." Because I mistook the bird for an Eagle, the button is included in this group. (I should have been more observing, but I might point out, in extenuation, that designs vary in detail, and that in some renditions the bird's head does resemble an Eagle's.) In any case, I was soon set right, and I now have official confirmation that the bird on the RAF button is an Albatross,—the great sea-bird which has long been a symbol and harbinger of good fortune. The present Royal Air Force was formed from the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service on April 1st, 1918. Buttons of the Royal Canadian Air Force bear this same device, with the letters "R.C.A.F." beneath. This particular button—of convex brass with raised design—came to me from Australia. Reverse: "Stokes & Sons—Melbourne."

No. 6 displays the two-headed Eagle of Imperial Russia (pre-1917) on a one-piece, convex, silvered button. Reverse: "St. Petersburg," and some Russian characters.

No. 7. About this button little seems to be known. It is made of black Plastic Horn, with raised design, metal shank and plain back. Mr. David Johnson shows it in his "The American Historical Buttons" (G-24); and in his "Supplement," the same design is pictured on an unidentified button of light metal (Z-82). There is speculation as to whether or not it is a Confederate button, proof either way seems lacking, to date.

No. 8 This (Army) General Service button, depicting the Seal of the United States, needs no description. It was first used about 1902; was current during both World Wars, and is found in a great variety of types, sizes, materials and back-markings. I have seen it in gilt, brass and copper; in silvered, dull-finished and painted metals; also in Vegetable Ivory, Compositions (such as "Ivoryine," etc.), tin, leather and modern button materials, including transparent and bright pink Plastics! (These latter, of course, being Costume buttons!) The Uniform buttons feature different types of loop shanks, while there are a few with holes, split shanks and applied designs. Without even trying, I have accumulated one hundred and fourteen varieties of this one design,—most of them genuine Uniform buttons—so it can be imagined how many could be collected with a little effort!

No. 9. Like No. 7, this button has not been definitely identified. A similar design is described by Captain Emilio (no. 275), who classes it as a Confederate button. Mr. Johnson also shows and describes it (G-23). Of one-piece light metal, it has an excellent design in low relief, and a heavy, wedge-shaped shank. Reverse: "Cordier Freres—Paris."

No. 10 is a German Army button (officer); slightly convex brass with raised design. The Eagle is the type shown on German stamps of 1924. Reverse: "Hochfeine Qualitaet."

No. 11 is also German: convex, silvered, with design in low relief against a pebbled ground. Captain Emilio ascribes this design to the Prussian Corps, 1901. It was probably still in use during the First World War. Reverse: "Hochfeine Qual."

No. 12 is a button of the German Luftwaffe (officer); convex brass with raised design against a pebbled ground. 1940-44. Reverse: "M5/252" and a small monogram.

No. 13. Flying Eagles are not as common as the "displayed" or "spread-eagle" type (of which Nos. 1, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 11 are examples), but they are not too hard to find. They appear on buttons of Alabama, Iowa and New York (National Guard), among others. Perhaps the best-known Flying Eagle belongs to the United States Army Engineers. Their familiar device was adopted in 1839, (according to Captain Emilio), and when the present General Service button was chosen by the Army (1902), the Engineers (officers) retained their old design. This particular button is a comparatively recent version, in brown-finished metal. Reverse: "Superior Quality."

No. 14. Entirely different in conception and technique is the Flying Eagle on this semi-spherical Italian button. Silvered brass with aluminum (?) back.

No. 15. This button of flat, khaki-colored Composition was worn by a member of the Womens' Army Auxiliary Corps from December 1942 until September 1943. When the WAAC became the WAC, it was furnished with regular Army buttons. The design is raised against a pebbled ground. Metal shank.

These fifteen buttons give only a faint idea of the variations and divergencies of which their subject is capable. Aside from the significance of each Eagle, and of the numerous countries, materials and button types represented, there are the conspicuous differences in the birds themselves. Who would believe that one bird could be portrayed in so many different ways?—Or that a mere collection of a head, tail, wings, claws and feathers could be so diversely conceived and assembled?

"THE BUTTON PARADE"

By
BROWN

You have but to see this book to appreciate the indefatigable research and time that the author put into it.

THE BUTTON PARADE has more than 40 full pages of button illustrations, superbly drawn by hand, showing buttons which could be depicted in no other way. Facing each page is a description of the button designs for identification purposes.

Also contains chapters on Classification; Arrangement and Display; and an illustrated Button Glossary of terms used in button collecting.

COVERED BUTTONS

By MARGUERITE MAPLE

COVERED BUTTONS embrace many types, materials and many crafts. Charming collections can be assembled. Let me attempt to show you how interesting they can be.

Looking for information on metal buttons, I found that there has always been a sort of tug-of-war between manufacturers of metal buttons and manufacturers of covered ones, the latter being just as important and far more perishable.

Let me quote W. C. Aitken who wrote in 1876: "Covered buttons are made in such immense variety of textiles that it is impossible to enumerate them, but it is sufficient to state that the ingenious construction, their good wearing qualities, the clever mechanism of the tools by which the various discs of cloth, metal, mill-board, etc., are cut out and finally the methods of uniting these together into a complete button, are marvels of skill and industry.

"The earliest (machine) covered button was made in 1802, by Mr. B. Sanders of Birmingham. This one had a metal shank but the ingenuity of the son completed the invention of the father and by substituting for the rigid metal shank a tuft of canvas, through which the button could be sewn on to the coat, created the flexible shank button. The only improvement made thereafter, consisted in covering the back of the silk-fronted buttons also with silk."

Hand-made covered buttons are known to have been in use in Elizabethan times, probably earlier. During the 18th Century richly embroidered ones were in vogue on men's coats and waistcoats. These were made over wooden moulds, the embroidered cloth discs fastened at the back with criss-crossed coarse threads, much in the manner of the later machine thread backs. These buttons are scarce and expensive. But many beautifully embroidered ones were fashioned by dressmakers and needlewomen in the later 19th and early 20th Centuries, all worthwhile collectibles today.

There are many other types that make charming collections those with separately covered raised designs; those with metal centers and applied decorations; and others with glass centers and moulded glass cameos.

There are woven collectibles, really gems, that came in with the Jacquard loom. Beaded buttons cover another type that are skillfully fashioned, some sewn on cloth discs, others crocheted and still others secured with fine wire. There are hand painted ones, crocheted ones and braided ones, to name just a few possibilities.

I've prepared some labeled cards of different types. I hope you will look them over carefully and maybe become a convert, as I have!

The following is a description of the labeled cards which were passed among the group and discussed:

1. Introductory: Showed types of moulds . . . bone, wood and one of pressed paper covered with muslin. Covered buttons were taken apart to show the construction . . . thread backs, those with flexible canvas shanks and those with metal frames.

2. Cloth combined with Vegetable Ivory: Various types were displayed illustrating the F. H. Goldthwaite & Co., Springfield, Mass.,* offer in 1888, to take scraps or pieces of any material and make into buttons, any amount, flat or ball shapes, plain or with an edge of ivory of the same or contrasting color.

3. Types and Combinations: Buttons with separately covered raised designs which included conventional and pictorial designs (birds, flowers, Liberty bell, stars, etc.); those combined with metal; and those combined with glass decorations.

4. Crocheted: Crochet designs over silken moulds; crochet combined with metal decorations and others with beads worked into the design.

5. Beaded Buttons: Beads sewn on cloth discs in all-over pattern, over wooden moulds; beads strung on fine wire then sewn to coarse cloth, over wooden moulds; beaded designs on silk, thread back; beaded design on velvet, then set in metal frame; some were all black, others were worked in colored beads.

6. Type of Needlework: This card carried out the star motif. On one the thread from each point was fastened at the back; on another a five-pointed star was worked directly on the silk disc; another, almost 2 inches in diameter, mould covered with coarse tan material resembling homespun, star of coarse thread, macramé type knotted thread border.

7. Embroidered: One on silk, silk and metallic thread embroidery, steel bead edge. Another, flower embroidered on silk set in metal frame; black embroidery on black silk, metal collet and flexible canvas shank; needle-point, rose design, etc.

8. Hand Painted: A large oval wooden mould covered with black satin, decorated in thick white paint, swan, lake and foliage. This button belongs to Miss Verner E. Clum, President, New York State Button Society. Miss Clum has long championed the covered button class and her tray of embroidered and woven buttons took many prizes.

Next followed the SHOW AND TELL part of the program. Members brought buttons or interesting information and shared with the group. Woven buttons were shown. The Williston and Knight factory was discussed.

Then Mrs. Ernest Adams, President of the Metropolitan Area Button Club demonstrated types of embroidery and showed how one might fashion covered buttons for one's accessories.

Covered buttons can be interesting, well-made and beautiful. Don't you think so, too?

NEW YORK

The Half Moon Button Club of Albany held its regular monthly meeting on December 12 in the Albany Institute of History and Art. President Mrs. Howard Aberle was in charge.

A Christmas party was held after the business meeting. Each member brought a package of ten little buttons for the grab bag, and one member brought a tree for the luncheon table with a button on it for each of the members.

Several articles pertaining to the Christmas season were read.

The club is planning a future all day display of buttons to which the public will be invited.

RHODE ISLAND

Grace E. Borden, president of the Rhode Island State Button Society, for the fourth consecutive year entertained members of the Society at an annual Christmas party. The customary holiday spirit prevailed under the light of the Christmas tree. The refreshments were made more attractive with the finely executed centerpiece of Christmas greens covered with button ornaments. In addition to the list of officers printed in an earlier issue, the following will also serve the club in 1946:

Librarian and Program Chairman: Mrs. Earl F. Quincy.

Committee members: Miss Dorothy Murphy, Miss Katharine M. Hurley, Mrs. Charles Woods, Frederick A. Hawksley, Mrs. Frederick A. Hawksley, Mrs. Earl King, Mrs. Earl Saunders, Miss Ella M. W. McCanna.

Plans are well under way for an Exhibit in the late spring with Mrs. Earl F. Quincy, chairman, Miss Ella M. W. McCanna, co-chairman.

INDIANA

The fall meeting of the Indiana Button Society was observed in all-day session at the home of Mrs. Adelaide Edwards, Indianapolis. Approximately 50 members were present. The 1945-46 officers are: President, Mrs. Nellie Martin; Vice President, Mrs. Adelaide Edwards; Secretary, Mrs. Mary O. Wetherbee, and Treasurer, George Gould. The club is making plans for its annual spring meeting to be held in Lafayette.

NOTICE

It has been suggested that HOBBIES reprint its original button publication, "Button Collecting," by Polly de S. Crummett.

Whether or not this would be advisable will depend on whether or not there is sufficient demand from our readers.

How many button readers would care to have a reprint copy of this edition at the original price of $1.50? Send your name if you are interested. We will be glad to have your pledges. Send no money now.

THE ADVENTURINE GLASS ART

is getting out a very beautiful line of earrings. Made in all beautiful colors with lots of brilliant gold stone.

Also a new line of Persian colored glass in buttons.

Every collector will be delighted to have one of these for their collection.

PAPIER MACHE

By FRANK FARRINGTON

IF PEOPLE almost invariably say "papier mashay," they are still near enough to the French name of a product so called because papier is the French for paper, and mache means macerated (practically, "chewed up"). The paper is made into a moist pulp and then molded into forms. An important factor in its production is the use of shellac which adds solidity and cohesive strength.

This product which has various industrial uses today, was originally used in the production of articles that, in the hands of the French, English, Dutch or sometimes Orientals, became artistic pieces of furniture to be handed down from the original English owners.

Old papier mache is not uncommon in the form of boxes, trays and other small articles, so finished as to resemble lacquered pieces. The molded pieces are japanned (the chief constituent of the japan being asphalt). When dried at a temperature of 300 degrees, Fahrenheit, the finished product is capable of withstanding a great degree of heat. It is tough and durable for its weight. It does not warp easily and usually is unaffected by dampness.

Decorations are applied by free-hand painting or, more commonly, by transfers. Such decorations will be found on handsome old tilt-top tables of which the tops are of papier mache. They are found on elaborately decorated large Chippendale trays of the same material.

The large trays and the tilt-tops of similar size and shape were often made by the use of sheets of specially prepared paper which were pasted together upon a shaping mold, and thus the fibre of the paper was not entirely destroyed, though the whole mass did achieve a pulpy nature. A thin tray so made might comprise as many as fifty sheets of paper.

Papier mache pieces frequently are decorated with mother-of-pearl or other ornamental products inlaid into the design. Before me, as I write is a tip-top table on the papier mache top of which is a beautiful, colorful design of Carisbrooke Castle, on the Isle of Wight, with mother-of-pearl inlaid for the windows. Also a large (25½ by 31½ inches) Chippendale tray of the same material, with a beautiful decoration in foliage, flowers, birds of paradise in vari-colored plumage, with a vine border around the rim, showing flowers in all colors.

Papier mache products have long been made in the East where painted boxes and trays have been typical products of Kashmir, India.

It was about 1760 that the industry gained a foothold in Europe, with the manufacture of items similar to those of the Orient, and japanned and decorated in similar designs. In fact, the European product was intended to be sold as an imitation of the Eastern and on the reputation and popularity of the latter.

Handsome pieces made of this material are not common, but when found in something like original condition are highly desirable and capable of adding effectively to the rooms where they are used.

LINCOLN PICTURES

(See Cover)

By LEONARD C. STOCK

While going through some old books, which had been in the family for years, I discovered a copy of Abbott's History of the Civil War, dated 1863.

Going through this book I found a steel engraving of Lincoln which was taken on February 27, 1860, by Brady. It is known as the Cooper Union picture, for it was taken the day after he made that famous speech at Cooper Union Institute in New York City.

Lincoln often remarked that that was the picture that made him President, and it is said that this was the picture that started Brady on his career as a photographer.

My discovery of this picture started me on my Lincolniana hobby, and I began to collect as many different faces of Lincoln as I could get. That was six years ago.

To date I have 91 different pictures under glass, also 46 old glass paperweights, backed up with a different picture of Lincoln in each, and in addition, I have several Lincoln plates, plaques, and busts.

Some of the more important items consist of a Currier and Ives' picture of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln and son, Tad, in the original oval frame, size 18x21 inches. This is considered to be rare. I also have a picture of Lincoln sitting facing to the left in an original half oval frame, 17x20 inches. My other specimens include: The Brady Print (likeness on the $5 bill) 22x27 inches. A copy of Lincoln's autobiography to Mr. Fell of Bloomington, Ill., 1860, 22x27 inches, with insert of the Brady print. Copy of the Emancipation Proclamation, 22x28 inches, insert of Lincoln. Picture of head of Lincoln and body of Webster, size 22x28 inches. New York Herald, April 15, 1865, announcing Lincoln's death with picture of Lincoln (beardless).

Also, have five different Currier & Ives, and five different views of the Lincoln family.

Mr. Lincoln never posed with any member of his family except his son, Tad, so all the family pictures are composite pictures, Lincoln and Tad being used as the background for the others.

Included in the collection is a plaster paris plaque, 22x24 inches, of the Gettysburg address with raised letters one-fourth inch high.

Many others are included which space will not permit me to enumerate.

I do not claim to have any original photographs. The picture I prize the most is a tin-type set in a brass token about the size of a quarter, dated 1860, with a picture of Lincoln on one side and Hannibal Hamlin on the other side, which was used as a pocket-piece or a watch charm.

The original of this picture was taken in Peoria, Ill., by H. H. Cole in 1858.

PAISLEY SHAWLS

Paisley shawls are now, and always have been, a drug on the market in antique circles. They must have been made in mass production a hundred years ago, because it seems that every family had one. Yet there has never been much of a demand for them. In shops they are dust collectors. In homes they are moth collectors. In most cases, practical use is made of them as piano covers.

At the last Chicago Antiques Exposition, Mrs. Virginia House of South Bend, Ind., appeared in a dress made of them which attracted considerable attention. It certainly was in keeping with the occasion. Her picture is shown here with wearing the dress in her home. If you belong to a collectors' club, historical society, or any organization of this kind, a paisley dress would be just the thing. At present costs, they are just as cheap as modern material.

Glass And China

STIEGEL

By JOHN BUDD LAMADE

WITH VERY few exceptions there is a prototype, whether Dutch, German, Italian, French, or English, for every piece of Stiegel glass made. The best way to comfort oneself that a certain piece of glass is Stiegel is to study authenticated Stiegel glass in museums and in reliable private collections until one is able to discriminate between the traits characteristic of Stiegel and those characteristic of other glass.

Among connoisseurs of American glass the products of "Baron" Heinrich Wilhelm Stiegel's three glass houses have always held a highly esteemed position. Admiration is not only due to the matchless Stiegel colors, but to its gem-like texture, to the graceful embossed patterns which embellish the surfaces of many pieces, and to its beauty of form and line in spite of the irregularities of shape which are due to its artisan type of manufacture.

It seems remarkable that so many pieces remain intact at this time, more than 160 years after its manufacture. Probably Stiegel was too delicate and too beautiful to be commonly utilized except "for company" and on especial occasions; hence, it was often kept as a decoration rather than as something for general use. Every household of pretensions from Boston to Baltimore aimed at displaying Stiegel mugs, bowls, flaps, and creamers. Even as far from Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, as a home in the West Indies there have been found a pair of authentic Stiegel jelly glasses along with one of the original Elizabeth Furnace stoves.

Mr. Hunter, in his book Stiegel Glass, has classified the Stiegel output into four groups: first, the simply-made plain-surfaced articles; second, pieces with ribbed, fluted, whorled, diamonded, paneled, and otherwise modeled surfaces; third, cut or engraved pieces; and last, flint glass decorated with vitrifiable enamels. This classification might be further simplified by making only two groups: those pieces which were originally plain-surfaced, whether they were later engraved or enameled or not; and those which would fall into Mr. Hunter's second group, with modeled surfaces. The classification itself is mainly of use in differentiating between Stiegel glass and other flint glass of early American or European manufacture. Simplification into two groups seems more practical since there were in either category only a limited number of factories which produced a quality of glass which might be confused with that of Stiegel. The splendid quality of Stiegel colorings, together with the magnificent surface texture, are the best bulwarks we have against mistaken identities or reproductions—whether English, Belgian, Swiss, Czechoslovakian, Mexican, or Pennsylvanian. No one else has ever been able to attain the true Stiegel colors either in vitrifiable enamels or in glass formulae.

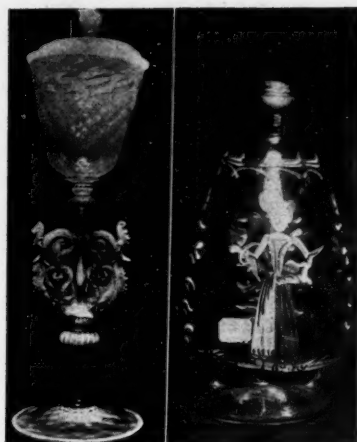

For instance, in the plain enameled pieces, Swiss glass shows great care in the enameling of designs, but lacks the Stiegel gloss in the surface; moreover, in contrast to the castle, dove, fantastic bird, and floral designs which are most commonly found on

Right—bottom: Mugs with various designs from 6½ inches to 7 inches.

Right: Brandy bottle, 7 1/2" high, "Joseph Welsh".

Stiegel pocket bottles, mugs, flip glasses, and medicine bottles, the Swiss used designs of the rabbit, boy and girl, and the milkmaid with yoke. And although the Swiss colored their enamels the most nearly like Stiegel's, their blue is very light, the red is dull and muddy, and Swiss green is utterly unlike the peculiar Stiegel Nile green. French glass usually uses either symbolic figures, heads, or heraldic designs, but the French colors are usually rather dull. German glass most nearly approaches Stiegel in the patterns of the enameled designs, but the colors are muddy and subdued. German yellow is mustard yellow. The blue is crude and unpleasant. Dull maroon is substituted for red. Browns and drabs of undecided tints are quite often encountered. The Germans are known to have employed a rather bold black outline, which, when found on Stiegel pieces, was used only very sparingly and executed with extreme delicacy. German enamels often show pinholes — something never found in Stiegel work.

Let us assume, as we consider the order of flint glass with modeled surfaces, a comparison mainly between Stiegel and the work of the Bristol factories, the principal competitors of Stiegel in this type of glass. Stiegel's products evidence a gem-like quality in their delicate surfaces. This probably accounts, to some extent at least, for the flame-like consistency of color that is to be found in the blues, the amethysts, and in a certain few pieces of Nile green flint. Bristol glass, without this trait, is of noticeably heavy and thick character.

The bases or feet on Stiegel bowls and wine glasses are much flatter than those from Bristol. The feet of Bristol pieces are generally in the shape of an inverted cone so that only the outside edges of the cone touch a plane surface. The Stiegel feet are so flat that often the entire bottom surface will touch a plane. This phenomenon is caused by the fact that Bristol feet are finished-off by rolling the edges down, while Stiegel edges are rolled up.

Stiegel's ribbing and patterns never run all the way to the pontil-mark while Bristol specimens show a marked tendency to do this. In Stiegel the pontil-marks are found to be quite large, whereas Bristol pontil-marks are uniformly small.

In his mixture Stiegel used metal in a more pure state than that which Bristol mixtures featured; moreover, there is a greater quantity of lead in the Stiegel mixture, so that the tiny imperfections which are so often found in Bristol and other wares are entirely absent in Stiegel glass. Pieces of Stiegel's blue flint invariably show, when light is allowed to pass through their thicker portions, traces of purple color. This effect is caused by the presence of antimony in the formula. In Bristol there were at one time a few pieces made which contained a certain amount of antimony, but the purple tint seen here is dull and dead in comparison with that of Stiegel. Those thoroughly acquainted with the purple "flame" in Stiegel blue could never mistake it in Bristol glass.

Stiegel flint glass, in addition to being rich and remarkably full of life in respect to color, has in its soft and brilliant surface a singular oily feel which is peculiar to Stiegel alone. Mr. Hunter says: "... the possession of a certain aptitude for fine perceptions; a trainable color sense and a developable responsiveness to textural and qualitative stimuli; and in the schooling of these by the constant handling of many examples." So in the final analysis it is really only a combination of the look and the feel of the glass that ultimately proves its genuineness.

LYNDA HADLEY - THOMASON

Three-Eighty Monroe Avenue

— Rochester 7, New York

#1—ROYAL VIENNA

You will learn about ROYAL VIENNA from these perfect 12 unsurpassed plates.

- 1—EUROPA, signed by Jos. Ruhs. Unforgettable portraiture.
- 2—DIANA AND IFFIGENINIA, signed, Jos. Ruhs.
- 3—TRIUMPH OF AMOR, signed H. Stadler.
- 4—VENUS AND ACHILLES by R. Pilz. Beauty beyond words in pictorial ceramics.
- 5—THE YOUNG VIRGIL by Angelica Kaufmann, dated 1774. Portraiture unsurpassed in any of the great classics.
- 6—THE YOUNG ACHILLES by Angelica Kaufmann, dated 1794; an unsurpassed portrait.
- 7—The exquisite DECORATION OF VENUS, by Eli Walden, named "Decoration." The very finest portraiture.
- 8—TRYUMPF OF AMOR by K. Radler, an entirely different concept to that of H. Stadler.
- 9—DIANA AND IFFIGENIA, another concept, exquisitely executed by T. Sörgmann; a portraiture never to be seen again. Such coloring unbelievable.
- 10—THE SHEPHERDESSES, by Angelica Kaufmann in her most exquisite manner and coloring, beautiful female figures in glorious poses.
- 11—BACCANTES by W. Paylander, one of the most beautiful portraits in all allegorical portraiture, the colors classified with great art.
- 12—THE TRIUMPH OF AMOR, another concept signed by R. Stadler, bewitching female figures with Cupid in Chariot.

These are the finest Royal Vienna plates ever put on the market in the USA. They are 10 3/4" diam., exquisite off shade Royal Blue rims, elaborate gold decor. and beads in white enamel. The gold alone on these plates would recover for at least $75. There has never been anything to equal them. The edges have heavy gold bands unlike anything we have ever seen. We will not separate them.

Price $350.00 for the dozen.

These plates were acquired by us from original sources and we have seen the original bill of sale. Each plate marked with the Royal Shield of Austria erroneously termed by amateurs the "beehive," in Royal blue. Each plate marked on the back in large letters identifying the subject. Each plate marked with name of artist. They are not the flimsy baroque style usually put out by the Vienna factory. These were carefully made for Austrian Royalty.

- #2. 12 of the very rarest Wedgwood, 9 1/4" plates, "Child's Proverbs," complete series, showing scenes of children in character depicting each of the 12 proverbs, quite the most unusual of all pictorial plates. These rank next to the Portland Vase in rarity and importance. Wide scalloped edges outlined in pale blue, rims ornamented with delicately raised floral and scrollwork. Bottom of plates 6" diam. Proverbs around entire circle, above and below background of urns, scrolls, etc. Across bottom oblong medallion showing children in various poses illustrating proverbs. 2 plates slightly damaged, not enough to alter value. 2 of these plates, badly damaged, sold at recent exhibition for $35. Wedgwood stamped in paste on back, other identifying marks. The 12 for $175. Write for Proverbs and detailed description of portraits.

- #3. Very fine sets of large dinner plates, supper plates, dessert plates, all the better makes, none less than 8 in a set, most sets of 12.

- #4. Nice selection of tea cups and saucers in the finer porcelains, unusual decorations & forms. Write for lists of plates and c/s.
- #5. Very finest porcelain "lobster dish" with openwork woven handle, 12" diam across widest part, 10" diam. across ends. Dainty gold decor. on irregular edges and sides, elaborate flower decorations in bottom of dishes. C. T. in Dresden style. $12.50.

- #6. We carry the most authentic of Early American furniture, fine porcelains, lamps, all decorative items available. If you have been interested in our material and ordered too late, check our ads and read through them together with your favorites as early as possible. We are always regretful to disappoint you. Or better still make up a list and let us have it on file. As soon as more material you wish comes in we shall contact you immediately. Our is a highly personalized service, every client receives our best attention. Thanks for your cards and good wishes, your continued goodwill. Cordially. fc

A California buyer who supports two specialty shops is going into antiques which she feels will help her between seasons. The following paragraph was taken from her letter:

"I have two of the finest specialty shops in this Santa Clara Valley. In going through HOBBIES which was loaned me I know that there must be the usual percentage of sharpshooters advertising. Would it be asking too much to advise me (off the record) the eastern firms in which I could order with confidence."

We advised this buyer that we carefully screen all our advertisers and that there were no sharpshooters in HOBBIES. We gave our assurance that she could order from any of them in perfect confidence. We could furnish her a list of sharpshooters, but it would be a list of those who have been kept out of HOBBIES.

We now read where General MacArthur has inaugurated free speech in the old Japanese empire. We ought to bring him home to inaugurate free speech in this country. Our late dictator did more to destroy it than any ruler we ever had. It is our opinion they had just about as much free speech in some of the so-called totalitarian countries as we had here.

In past years, a reader would occasionally write us to say that we must admit we still had free speech or we could not get away with what we said. Yet, we would give a substantial prize to anyone who can find anything printed in this magazine that was not well within our constitutional rights. It shows how easily a dictator can impose upon his own people the very things that he ostensibly opposes in other countries. Yet, all of us in the publishing business found out at different times that it paid to go mighty easy on criticism of the Roosevelt regime. The fellow had a child mind; he stormed at criticism from whatever small source. Whenever we wrote an editorial that we knew aroused thought because of the letter responses it instigated, we felt the weight of the government. Many of the New Deal henchmen, mostly those born in foreign countries, thought anyone who criticised their chief ought to be in jail. We had pressure and intimidation brought upon us by various departments of the Government who seemed to want to let objectors know what they could do. We felt the weight of the Post Office, Income Tax Division, Wage and Hour Law, and many other governmental agencies.

Yet, all this time the sick man was running around the world talking about free speech for other people. Then when the time came that these other nations brought up the pledges of the Atlantic Charter, he said that was not the law of the country but only his word.

When the Republicans were in, you people did not fear to criticize because no threats were made against you. You criticized Mr. Harding, Mr. Coolidge, and Mr. Hoover to your heart's content. Vile and vicious book and magazine articles were written against these statesmen, and there was never a whisper of threats or intimidations used against the writers.

At this time we see the Democrats moving heaven and earth to keep down facts regarding the Pearl Harbor debacle, although it has always been known that Japan was to be goaded into an attack in order that we might get into the war by the back door, as Senator Johnson, of California, charged on the floor of the Senate a year before war broke out. The Democrats, instead of hiding, should step out and help get at the truth. When the Republicans faced the Teapot Dome scandal, such Republican senators as Borah, Johnson, Capper, and others helped to bring out the facts. It must be said for the Republicans that, as a whole, they did not attempt to defend any crookedness within the administration. President Coolidge kicked Harry Daugherty out of the cabinet. Albert Fall, a member of the cabinet, was allowed to go to the penitentiary. Yet the Republican administration was re-elected. The public knew there were crooks in the Republican party, the same as there are in the Democratic, and the party was better off for weeding out the facts and presenting them to the people rather than attempting to defend the crooks.

The protests of the G. I.'s around the world ought to be a warning that there is trouble ahead if this nation attempts to establish a police force composed of American boys to take other nation's chestnuts out of the fire in every remote corner of the world. What guarantee can the advocates of this scheme give that the American people are going to furnish the manpower? Whose boys are going? Probably, only those who are friendless and helpless.

The soldiers know when they arrive in these places that they have no business there any more than they had in India to keep those people under the thumb of a power which has exploited them. When they are sent to other remote parts of the world, they soon find out that they are there as tools of powerful exploiters who are destroying the liberties of defenseless people and bandying them about without their consent. We will continue to gain the hatred of the entire world.

Writers told us of the terrible havoc and destruction wrought by the war in England, Germany, Russia, Japan, and numerous other countries. We ought to have sense enough to know that we did not suffer this damage because of our isolation. Certainly the policy of isolation should have proved itself. I believe in isolation today more than ever. Let us keep our nose out of other people's business. Let us keep aloof from their constant quarrels and their eternal wars. But let us prepare to defend ourselves against all comers.

To defend ourselves, we need Bermuda where we should stay permanently, just as we need Hawaii. We made the mistake of giving Greenland back to Denmark. We will need it for future defense. What can a little country like Denmark do with Greenland? They have owned it several centuries and never, in the slightest, developed it. Denmark, with less population than the city of Chicago, cannot defend it. They say, "Let Denmark have it back, we can take it whenever we want it." Yes, if we get there first. For our future security, we need a permanent union with Canada under one government. It would have been much smarter, instead of getting mixed up with Europe's quarrels, to have annexed the Dominion of Canada. We will have to do it eventually anyhow for our mutual protection.

We hope by this time the Circulation Department is caught up so that everyone has their 1946 subscriptions started. We were swamped with Christmas subscriptions. It would have thrown any publisher back, even in normal times. We have been doing our best to get everybody on the list, and while there was some delay, we gradually got caught up. People tell us they have worse delay with the general magazines than they do with HOBBIES. However, as they do not have a special interest, they do not miss them so much and naturally are more patient.

DREW BOYS OUT

The Drew brothers, well known antique dealers of Omaha, received Army discharges during December and will soon be active in the antique world again.

Sergeant Louis B. Drew was discharged on December 17 from the Air Corps. He had served nearly two years in the Pacific area, out of his three years in the army. He spent the last few months in the Tokyo area.

Captain Jack Drew was discharged on December 21 from the Chemical Warfare Service. He had served nearly four and a half years and had been stationed in New York, Massachusetts, Alabama, Maryland and Georgia. He received his discharge from Atlanta, Georgia, where he had been serving as Director of Internal Security.

NEWS — Here and There

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt uses the franking privilege as is customary in the case of presidential widows. Her full name, Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, is used in the frank, and it said that she usually uses a stamp which is in the form of an autograph, although occasionally she writes her name on her mail.

Joseph J. Lawler, Third Assistant Postmaster General, presided at the ceremonies held in connection with the first-day sale of the new Texas stamp which was released at Austin on December 29, to commemorate the admission of Texas into the Union as the 28th State.

Mr. Lawler paid great tribute to the momentous event and described the amazing strides made by Texas in every line of industry, in agriculture, and in education.

—O—

The Norwegian National Museum was founded December 19, 1894, and could consequently solemnize its 50th anniversary last year. At the time, however, this event was secreted by reason of the political circumstances in Norway during the German occupation.

In commemoration of the jubilee at this date two postage stamps to the values of 10 ore and 20 ore have been issued. About 5 millions will be printed of each value.

The values are 10 (green) and 20 (red), and the designs are respectively the Arms of Norsk and the Folk-museum.

Persia-Iran Items

A retired "Sea-Bee" asks "Who has the old items I need to complete my Persia-Iran pages? I have a very spotty showing, and I chased dealers at every port coming home. There are elusives in that section of the catalog that should be labelled 'gone and forgotten' as well as gaps where we have scruples (not a bother in Europe) about commercial issues and such. But even with our scruples we get no more and little less than get abroad. Marseilles was the best, but I got some, of all places, in Bombay."

I knew just one dealer here, and that was a washout, no stock. So maybe there is a shortage developing in Persia-Iran items?

Surely, and claiming the stock book on the counter is full does not make it so. You look around yourself
Plenty other countries where the boys have sojourned are in the same condition, in the counter books.

Which is not news. Just facts, repeated.

Channel Islands

So the Channel Islands and some other places get stamps! It was advocated in this column several years ago. But the Isle of Man, with its own legislative body, the House of Keys, a language (as good as DeValeras resurrected effort) and many other things that are surely worthy of a stamp issue, if the Channel Islands get theirs.

What a scenic issue Snaefell and

ATTENTION! STAMP COLLECTORS

To help you enjoy this fine hobby, we have these four points we'd like to name:

1. OUR 60 page "COLLECTORS HANDBOOK" which lists U. S. stamps, first day covers, Christmas Seals and supplies. A copy (handy pocket size) will be sent free upon request.

2. OUR Monthly Auctions: Better stamps, covers and collections offered to the highest bidders. Prospective bidders should ask for catalogs.

3. APPROVALS: A personal approval service to old customers and new alike. Our only request is that new customers furnish commercial references. We have stamps, seals and covers of the world and will be glad to know what fields interest you!

4. CASH for your collection! If you have a fine collection for sale, it will pay you to send it to me for a prompt cash offer. We need specialized as well as general collections of all types at all times to maintain one of the world's most varied stampic stocks!

the other lovely views would make—Humped bridges and strange houses, and cliffs and waterfalls. Those are impossible in the Channel Islands. Just cows, Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and, well what grows on Sark?

Yes, the Manx cats, some of them, are tailless. Believe it or not. And the population is truly worth notice.

This column advocated Aden—Isle of Man and the Channel Islands. The issues have landed, all but the most deserving one.

Belgium Issue

There is another, now much more difficult, matter in the Belgian issues. The item Scott type A46, heading the issue of 1915-20 typographed, was issued variously and there are four types, even easier to check than the inverted frames of Denmark. The European catalogues give the four varying types and the values that appear for or from each type. They are more than "quite" interesting. But our knowledge of them has to be gleaned from British or German sources and as there are now many enthusiasts on Belgium, the lack is causing query. (You will find type A46 again used on the Red Cross semi postals of 1915—check with the regular postage items.)

Perhaps we do not make such a point of plate variations as do the continental and British collectors. But all such things have a distinct interest and if we have to go abroad for the full information we surely lose some of the satisfaction of making a 100% correct and complete page arrangement the first time we set up such items.

Inflation Issues of the Reich

Some time ago remarks were made as to the extreme difficulty of completing a showing of "used" copies of all the "Inflation issues" of the German Reich (or from No. 105 to No. 339). Likely more difficult now.

But a quote: "You sort of challenged the possibility of this being done. You were more nearly right than you knew, I am still short about 15% and have as you know a wholesale stock to aid on the hard numbers, it is a tough job, but very interesting."

Never thought it would be that interesting—but it is surely difficult and quite unusual—as well as not usually done. Try it. Cheap stuff, yes. Easy to get? That is something else—harder daily.

The "Dauber Postal Clerk"

The Collector's Club of Washington, D. C., makes some pertinent remarks about a new code of regulations, with which, no doubt, most stamp collectors will concur. Quoting the Collectors Club bulletin:

"The Post Office Department is to be congratulated on its stand just taken that daubers must not be used on mail, especially philatelic mail. A new code of regulations compels all offices to have good, clear and efficient equipment from now on. Some of the cancellations in the past have been disgraceful and the Department calls a halt on such poor work so that collectors will be pleased from now on—we hope. The dauber has had friends among postal clerks and it is hoped that in the future if there are bad cancellations some action will be taken against the man who seemingly does not like stamp collectors if he continues with his bad cancellations. Let us hope the Department will now see that violations are severely dealt with. It's time to make an example with the 'dauber postal clerk.'"

WHAT IS A POSTAGE METER?

A POSTAGE meter is a government-licensed office machine. It prints postage as required directly on envelope, or ejects an adhesive stamp, for any type or class of mail, including air mail, special delivery and parcel post. In a single operation, it prints prepaid postage with a dated postmark and an optional private advertisement—and it seals the envelope as well.

The postage it prints is non-negotiable. It can't be "begged, borrowed or stolen"; can't be used by anyone but the licensed user whose individual meter number appears in the meter stamp itself. And it does its own bookkeeping through visible registers showing postage used and postage on hand—in dollars and cents.

Metered Mail is not only faster in the business office, but in the post office as well.

Needing no "facing," no canceling, no postmarking . . . it skips several time-taking operations in the post office, goes direct to the primary sorting sections to catch earlier trains and planes . . . for earlier delivery at destination.

The meter itself, a detachable unit of the complete machine, contains the postage printing die and recording mechanism. Whenever the user needs postage, he takes it to the Post Office to be "set." Postage is paid in advance, as when buying ordinary postage stamps. It need not be exhausted of postage before being re-set, but if the postage is allowed to run out, the meter automatically locks against further use. Meters come in various models: some print only a single denomination of stamp, some several denominations, and some any denomination up to $99.99.

Because meters print postage and collect government revenue under official lock and seal, they cannot be owned outright. They are leased from the authorized manufacturer who is responsible for their proper operation, service and location.

The machine, as distinguished from the meter, operates the meter, seals envelopes and ejects meter stamps for affixing to bulky pieces and parcels. It comes in a wide range of hand and electrically driven models, for large firms and small, with speeds ranging up to 300 letters per minute. It is usually sold outright to the mailer.

The postage meter today is an indispensable tool of business, industry and government. It has now replaced the old-fashioned adhesive postage stamp on a fifth of all U. S. Mail, and is in world-wide use. It has printed and recorded more than one and a half billions of dollars worth of postage in this country alone.

As this historical review proves, it is a classic example of American inventive genius and free enterprise, aimed at public service, and encouraged by progressive government.

Limitations in terms of minimum daily quantities to be mailed, and other regulations originally designed for the "permit" mail used in advertising and circularizing . . . all combined to confine Metered Mail to the very large mailers, and to force it to compete with ordinary printing devices whose manufacturers sought equal postal consideration.

By 1928, however, Pitney-Bowes had demonstrated not only that Metered Mail was foolproof, but in that year was able to show a Congressional committee, in cooperation with the Post Office Department, that it was far cheaper for the Government to handle Metered Mail than regular stamped mail, and that the oldest "permit" system, involving postage deposits and daily verifications of mail volume at local post offices, was excessively costly for first class mail.

Regulations were issued which for the first time clearly distinguished prepaid Metered Mail from "permit" mail. For the first time, the postage meter was free to dispatch any letter mail in any quantity—from one piece to a million or more. And the way was paved for future liberalization which today places the meter stamp on virtually the same footing as the adhesive stamp.

In 1929, Pitney-Bowes acquired an interest in Universal Postal Frankers, Ltd., of London; and the two companies soon began sharing new developments in the interest of greater improvement of Metered Mail postal service and the mechanical art. Metered Mail in the United States, Britain, Canada and elsewhere in the world has since greatly benefited by this sharing of technical inventions and improvements.

Up to 1929 the postage meter was a single-denomination unit only, which meant that mailers required separate meters for each denomination of postage. And since they were used in conjunction with highspeed stamping and sealing machines which handled relatively flat and uniform letter mail, there was evident need for a device which could also meter heavy and odd sizes and thickness of mail—and which could, at the same time, be designed and priced for the medium-sized business firm. It wasn't long in coming.

The year 1929 saw the introduction of the first Pitney-Bowes multi-denomination postage meter, which extended Metered Mail service beyond relatively flat and uniform letter mail of the first and third classes to mail of virtually all kinds and classes, all weights and sizes.

By "dialing" any one or more of five values (e.g. 1c, 2c, 5c, 10c, and 25c) in a single meter, it was possible to select and print any amount of postage. The values were later increased from five to ten.

The Postage Meter was now ready to handle air mail, special delivery, registered mail—and parcel post. A new detachable tape-printing attachment, which delivered imprinted meter stamps on adhesive labels, enabled the Meter to handle anything from a post card to a roll of blueprints.

Upon the completion of the first decade of Metered Mail service in 1930, the Post Office Department, now convinced of its great savings and efficiency to business and government alike, amended the postal regulations to permit extension of the system to parcel post and all other classes of mail matter; and to permit the deposit of business firms' Metered Mail in designated street collection boxes, rather than at the post office only. "From the 25th Annual Report of the Pitney-Bowes Postage Meter Company."

Notes on Two Early Breech-Loaders

By MAJOR B. R. LEWIS

Extract from "Annual of Scientific Discovery"—1854

HERE ARE some notes of 1850 and 1854 on the Marston and the Jennings arms, two early breech-loader, the latter the forerunner of tubular-magazine level-action rifles.

Many old U. S. bayonets are found with certain cryptic letters and numbers, but no dates. These markings were placed on muskets and a corresponding stamp on the socket of the bayonet for that particular arm. The Regulations for National Armories, dated November 12, 1816, prescribes the method to be followed in marking muskets and bayonets.

The name of the manufacturer or of the armory with the year was to be stamped on the lockplate, behind the cock. An eagle with the letters U. S. was to be stamped under the pan. The year of fabrication was to be placed on the breech-plug tang, and U. S. marked on the tang of the butt plate. The contractor was permitted to substitute his name for the place of manufacture. This has caused considerable confusion; for instance, the muskets made under the McRae contract were marked "Virginia Manufactory," the place where they were made. But if Henry or Jenks used simply "Philadelphia," it might be anybody's guess who made the piece so-marked.

The muskets and bayonets were to be numbered in a new series for each year. Muskets were marked on the barrel near the breech and bayonets on the socket. The alphabet was combined with numbers to form the series of serial numbers for the arms. For a given year, the first muskets made started with series A, numbering them A, A1, A2, A3, etc. to A99. Then came B, B1, B2, to B99, then the C, D, and E series up to Z. There the second series for the year started, this time placing a lower case "a" below the capital letters; for instance, the small a under the capital letter A. Then followed the capital B with the small a beneath it, etc. By running through the alphabet twice, more numbers were available than the likely total output for any year. The instructions mention that there would thus be 2400 stands per series. It is thought that the letters "J" and "V" were not used, to avoid possible confusion.

To determine the serial number for one of the muskets so marked, figure that the first 2400 were in the series with only capital letters, the second 2400 in the series with a sub-letter "a", the third 2400 with sub-letter "b", etc. The number within the series of 2400 can then be determined.

Improvement in Fire Arms

Marston's Improved Gun and Cartridge.—Mr. Marston's invention consists in a breech-bolt or slide which, by drawing the lever forward, is brought back from the breach end of the barrel a sufficient distance to allow space in the breach in which to place a ball cartridge. When the cartridge is placed in this chamber through an opening on the right hand side of the gun, the lever is drawn back, and the ball cartridge is forced by a pressure of some 40 or 50 lbs. into its seat in the barrel. The piece is now loaded, and by placing a cap on the nipple it is ready to be discharged. The fire is communicated to the rear end of the cartridge by a small hole running through the nipple to the breech-bolt and thence to the cartridge, which is perforated in the center, as will be presently described. The most ingenious part of the construction is at the top of the lever, where there is a slat or slide in the shape of a knee-joint, in which the pin of the breech-bolt works. When the lever is brought forward in drawing back the breech-bolt, the top of the lever slides along on the pin connecting it with the bolt the whole length of the slat, and the lever then hangs at right angles with the breech-bolt, and offers no resistance to the backward motion of the breech-bolt. But as soon as the lever is drawn back, and the cartridge driven into its seat, the lever and breech-bolt being at an angle of 135 degrees, and formed at their connection so as to fit at that angle, the resistance to the backward force produced by the fire is complete, the two pieces of metal fitting each other in a similar way to that of the keystone of an arch fitting the stones on each side. A small round bush enters the breech end of the barrel, and surrounds the cartridge and breech-pin at their junction so as effectually to prevent the leakage of smoke or fire when the piece is discharged.

The cartridge deserves special attention. It is composed of the usual materials with a conical ball cemented into it. The rear end, however, has a leather button or disc attached to it, of somewhat larger diameter than the bore of the barrel. This is why a lever is employed to force it into the barrel. This leather button is perforated in the center to receive the flash from the cap, as above described. The first fire of the gun will leave this leather button (which is previously greased,) in the large end of the barrel, and the second fire will force the button through the barrel, thoroughly cleaning it for the discharge which immediately succeeds. The result of this is, that the gun is kept constantly clean. However, as the leather button is left in, every time, it would seem to be necessary to expel it, or draw it out by some other means than by firing, when it is intended to lay by the gun, otherwise the effect of the last shot would still remain in the barrel. A ramrod is furnished with each gun for this purpose, or for uncharging, or for loading the gun at the muzzle in the old way.

The lock is a slight improvement upon the ordinary locks: the lever hangs upon a pin with an elongated hole, which allows it to rise and fall so as to avoid the necessity of another piece of metal between it and the piece which works the tumbler, simplifying that which has always been the most complex portion of fire-arms.

Gibbs' Patent Revolver.—This invention differs essentially from Colt's Revolver, in having no center-pin to the cylinder, which revolves on two raised bearers inside a fixed brass case, covering two-thirds of the cylinder above, and a slide bearing the weight of the cylinder below. This slide is easily withdrawn when it is desirable to take out the cylinder. The slide is so constructed as to continue under the barrel in the shape of a stock, leaving space sufficient between the slide and the barrel to permit of the exit of all the balls at once, should they all go off, without danger to the person, the covering above the cylinder protecting the eyes and face, and the slide below protecting the hand from the effects of such an accident. The inventor declares that he has fired five cartridges and balls at once, without harm. The cylinder is revolved in the most simple manner by a slide similar to a trigger, working in a slot in the under side of the case or breech, formed by the brass slide already described. This trigger is worked by touching it with the left hand, every motion of which acts upon the cylinder within, by means of a catch, of which there are seven round the cylinder.

NUMISMATICS

NUMISMATIC THOUGHTS

By FRANK C. ROSS

A Word to the Wise

With the striking during the past few years of hundreds of thousands of subsidiary coins, the collector naturally concludes these coins will not become scarce during or even after his lifetime, basing his conclusion on the plentifulness of many coins a hundred years old with the mintage running only into a few thousands. But he should not fool himself. Take the 1846 dime for instance with its only 31,300 mintage (or other like coins); they are not considered extremely scarce, and priced at only from $1 to $2. In comparison, the collector argues, what chance has current coins with their large mintage ever becoming classed scarce with a premium value to match. As there are so few 1846 dimes in uncirculated condition collectors can't be choosy and have to accept specimens in almost any condition; thus there are enough to go around and at reasonable prices. Ten to twenty years hence there will still be vast numbers of our present current coins on hand, but the very fact there are so many, collectors will accept only those in uncirculated condition, and the uncirculated ones being limited will bring high prices, while the numberless circulated ones will go begging. It behooves one to secure from his bank a roll of all current coins each year in uncirculated condition, plant them away and watch them grow. Securing them at face value he cannot possibly lose, and stands to double his money several times over.

oOo

1823 Quarter a Mystery Coin

The 1827 quarter is the rarest and highest priced twenty-five cent piece, but as there were only 4,000 minted and probably got into circulation and most of them frictioned of their dates, their scarcity and high premium is excusable. But with its runner-up, the next in rarity and price, the 1823 quarter, it is entirely different. Its rarity is one of the mysteries of coinage. There were 17,800 of them struck, and in comparison with other coins of approximately like age and like mintage, the extreme scarcity of the 1823 quarters is all out of proportion. In the absence of any accepted reasons, one can merely guess, as to the cause of the disappearance of so many of the 1823 quarters. The government record as to number struck may be in error; maybe only a very few of the coins got into circulation and the uncirculated ones were re-minted into other denominations; a large boat-shipment may have suffered a shipwreck; and too, they may have been buried for safe keeping by some "fraidy-calf" of banks, and may turn up later to upset our present accepted scarcity data. Another odd thing about the 1823 quarter, the issue is an overdated one, 3 over 2. A few of the other denominations have met with the same experience, most of the coins of their issue having gone absent without leaving a trace, giving the Sherlock Holmes-minded collectors something to play with.

Mother Goose and Money

Old Mother Goose knew her numismatics. What you have always considered a child-pleasing jingle is numismatic history. Little Jack Horner's plum was not a fruit, but money, and his pie was not a myth. Look in your Imperial unabridged dictionary and you will find: Plum—The sum of 100,000 pounds sterling.

Robert Pilgrim in the Family Circle under Food for Thought tells us: The most famous Christmas pie was Little Jack Horner's of nursery rhyme fame. Little Jack Horner really lived, and took a real "plum" from the pie he was delivering to Henry VIII on Christmas, 1538. A title to the rich manor of Mells was hidden in the pie by the Abbot of Glastonbury, who hired Jack to deliver it to the King. On the way Jack stuck in his thumb, filched the Mells title plum for himself. It was called a "plum" because it was worth equal to one plum, monetary standard.

Hunting for buried treasure is an American avocation. Captain Kidd and other piratical buccaneers little dreamed when they buried their treasures they were instituting the "hide and go seek" pastime of a great nation. All hidden treasures are not fiction, not figments of legendary lore. An A.P. news item says, "The Rumanian government asserted today it had found about four million lei hidden in the garden of the Bucharest home of Rudolph Lupescu, brother of Magda Lupescu, friend of exiled King Carol." The Chinese are now searching for the buried treasure of a former ruler of the 17th century which was cached for safe-keeping, but with the location of the hiding place uncharted. It was the usual custom of the hiders of treasures to kill the workmen on the job to prevent any possible leak of the location.

U. S. Pattern

Here's the latest word on U. S. Pattern coins, now in the forefront. A dealer wrote me on October 10, "I have just sold five U. S. Pattern gold coins for a total of $6,600, probably another world's record."

Collectanea

In complaining about the expensive activities of the government we should exclude the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Mint; they are both "money makers," and of the two the Bureau outranks the Mint; it costs the Mint approximately 25 cents worth of silver to produce

United States paper money is the most perfect of any in the world. The paper itself is the most durable, the ink is prepared by the Bureau itself, and the designs when completed are the product of many steel engravers, each an expert in his line. It takes about six months to prepare a die.

Telling a girl she looks like a million dollars has become a doubtful compliment, suggestive of small change. Toledo Blade.

Well named. Our Trade Dollar is called the "black sheep;" the Buffalo nickel because it lacks the In God We Trust is known as the "irreligious;" commemorative coins are "the Sign posts of history."

—o—

As to prominent designs on our coins, Liberty head and the eagle predominate; the wreath probably ranks third. Check over your coins, especially the older dates, and you will be surprised at the number of wreaths.

oOo

Don't wash your copper cents or half-cents with acid, such as lemon or orange juice; if you must clean them, use warm water and the very finest of toilet soap, drying gently with a very soft cloth.

Coins from Japan are now of special interest. The flowers seen on many of the coins are the chrysanthemums and the paulownia. They are symbols only, the chrysanthemum of the Emperor and the paulownia of the Empress.

Extremely rare dates and premium values are but mere details in the romance of money, of interest only to mere coin collectors and of little consideration to real numismatists. To historians money is the key that unlocks the doors to hidden knowledge.

The Almost Forgotten Notes of Missouri

A paper (much condensed) read by Frank W. Osborn at a meeting of Kansas City's coin club.

I SPEAK of the $10 and $20 Missouri (Civil War) notes which I exhibit here as the "almost forgotten" notes because we hear and know so little about them. Collectors are familiar with the Revolutionary period state notes, the Continental notes, Confederate notes, railway and store notes, but strange to say we hear very little of the strangest of the strangest, the Missouri Civil War period notes. You will note that while they are not up to the standard of our present circulating paper money, the paper in them is of fair grade and the engraving passing fair; size about seven by three, both dated January 1, 1862, both countersigned by Governor C. F. Jackson, and payable three years after date at ten per cent interest. While $10,000,000 were authorized, I have been unable to learn how many were actually issued or in what denominations.

Floyd C. Shoemaker, secretary of the State Historical Society of Missouri, Columbia, Mo., very kindly gave much valuable information about the notes and I am sure you members will join me in thanks to him for his valuable enlightenment on them, and with his permission I take the liberty of reading his letter:

"Dear Sir:—I have your recent letter in regard to two specimens of Missouri civil war notes of 1862 countersigned by C. F. Jackson. I feel reasonably certain that the notes you mention are examples of those issued by authority of the deposed pro-Southern or Jackson government of Missouri under the provisions of an act of 1861.

"You will perhaps recall that Governor Jackson and the legislature elected in August 1860 were deposed by the Missouri State Convention on July 30, 1861, and the Provisional Government of Missouri inaugurated on July 31, 1861, with Hamilton R. Gamble as governor. Despite this fact, however, the Jackson government made an effort to function and to maintain itself, even though all of its officials had been driven from the capital. After the capture of Lexington (Mo.) by General Price in September, 1861, Jackson called the remnants of his old legislature to meet at Neosho in Newton county. This session of what is known as the 'Rebel Legislature' met at Neosho and later at Cassville, Mo., between October 21 and November 7, 1861. Among other acts passed by this 'Rebel Legislature' at its Neosho-Cassville session was one entitled 'AN ACT to provide for the defense of the State of Missouri,' passed and approved on November 1, 1861. The paper currency or 'bonds' about which you inquire were issued under the provisions of this act. The act provided that bonds to the amount of ten million dollars 'to be denominated Defense Bonds shall be issued, payable in three, five and seven years, and shall be receivable in payment of all dues.' Section 3 of the act provided that: 'Said bonds shall be issued in sums of not less than one and not greater than $500; and all bonds of five dollars and upward shall bear interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum from their issue.' It was further provided (Sec. 9) that the bonds should be 'legally receivable in payment of all taxes and debts due the State.' They were to be issued by three commissioners, appointed under the provisions of the act, and were to be countersigned by the governor or Treasurer. (See: Journal of the Senate, Extra Session of the Rebel Legislature Called Together by a Proclamation of C. F. Jackson).

"The Society has in its files one of these Missouri Defense Bonds which bears the imprint 'Keatinge & Ball, Columbia, S. C.' From this it would appear that at least a part of the bonds were engraved or printed by a South Carolina firm of this name. I regret that I know of no official document which shows whether or not the entire issue of $10,000,000 was engraved or printed, how many of each denomination were issued, the number placed in circulation, or what disposition may have been made of any part of the issue not placed in circulation."

Recollections of an Old Collector

By THOMAS L. ELDER
What To Collect

The ranks of collectors of coins and paper money are being rapidly augmented, I am reliably informed. Club and Society memberships are growing. There arises the question as to what the newcomer should collect in the beginning. So many have turned to the late U. S. series that there is a perfect stampede to obtain rarities which have about disappeared from the market.

Most ads today are for more modern classes and late dates, the scarcity of U. S. coins more than 125 years old, for instance, is apparent from their absence from the ads and even the auction sales catalogs.

Regarding some rarities in U. S. coins there are verily more collectors than there are coins to supply them. This should mean that many newcomers should start in other series of which there are plenty of classes, and turn thoughts away from dates and die breaks to center on things like ancient Greek and Roman coins, the Egyptian series, the Parthian, Sassanian and other lines of ancient coins.

The Roman series is filled with historical references from the denarius of Marc Antony and Cleopatra to the denarius struck on account of the assassination of the famed Julius Caesar, "the greatest Roman of them all," a marvelous man, who if he walked today on Fifth Avenue, might, dressed in modern suit, look like any intelligent business man. Not all his coins are rare or hard to get for a moderate price.

There are others referring to Parthian and German victories. There is a cheap denarius of Valerian I of Rome, captured by Sapor of Persia and held by him as a prisoner and slave for life. There is no record he ever was liberated, though he may have been well treated. There is another story that he was late "Killed and Stuffed." It is the descendants of this Persian who are having the ruction today with Soviet Russia on the borders of Persia. Interesting! Ancient Persia was a more formidable adversary in ancient times than today, when openly defied by Moscow with Teheran the capitol even threatened by revolutionists who evidently are connived with by Russia in that field of oil and politics.

In the medieval series there is the alluring offerings in German, French, and continental Europe including feudal lords and bishops. These coins do not always cost a lot of money, and are of good workmanship and easily deciphered.

The English and Anglo-Saxons series also beckons to the beginner. Many have become high priced but interesting early dated English ones are still available for moderate prices. You could collect dates of English half and quarter pence.

Just as interesting as our large and small cents and likely more sub-varieties, are misspelled rulers names, and whatnot, also dates. There is also the American colonial and continental series, which open up a good field not overcrowded today. Many varieties are available for comparatively moderate prices. From the foregoing it is apparent that one is not obliged, when starting a coin collection, to collect buffalo nickels or large or small cents, or early U. S. dollars, halves and quarters, or U. S. half dimes of 1805, now ranging from $100 to $125 each.

It is a hard go for a beginner to try to pay $100 for a single coin and he is not obliged to do so if he starts some series of coins, nor need that series be uninteresting or unprofitable to collect. In paper money, the field is better today though the interest grows apace. A collection of Confederate notes was recently sold at Philadelphia for $1100. A big collection of U. S. Fractional notes sold recently at auction for several thousand dollars, while a super collection of U. S. greenbacks sold for over $100,000. So the young beginner should know, first, he does not have to start in the U. S. series to be a successful coin collector, nor does he need to spend a thousand dollars to begin a collection. In fact he can begin a collection of some classes for as little as one hundred dollars. He can take on the rarities and hard-to-get-items a little later.

Deflation, Inflation, and Coins

After the smash and crash of the 1929, there ensued for a short period a deflation in prices, which included the prices, of coins, paper money, antiques and curios. The late William Lanier Washington told me that at one short period of this deflation that he could hardly give away his antiques, and relics of other days. Coin prices also went from bad to worse, the depth of the price deflation seemed to have been reached by June, 1932, when the writer held a fine coin sale in New York at which a Montana collector's effects were sold, among them some of the finest of U. S. gold and silver coins. The result was deplorable. Well known collectors, some of them active today, sat silently in chairs in the sales room and allowed choice U. S. Half eagles before 1814 to be sold for $7 and $7.50 apiece, a Stella for under $80, a choice proof. The reduction in the gold content of the dollar in value did little to help matters although our national debt at that time was a mere joke compared to today's.

Slowly from 1932 on coin prices improved. Those were the days when Lincoln S. Cents of 1909, with VDB continued to be offered in lots of five or six in the sales and brought 25 to 30c a coin for fine specimen. Small bronze cents of 1864 with an L sold for 25c to 50c at auction. As late as 1935 I bought dozens of them in fine state from a St. Louis dealer at 35 cents a coin. Their price today is $12 to $13.50 apiece, while the Lincoln cent in fine shape, S dated 1909 with VDB sells readily at $5 to $7 per coin, and not many are offered.

With the heavy war expenditures added to the money situation from 1939 to 1941, when we were attacked at Pearl Harbor coin prices picked up more rapidly. The ease in the money market showed decidedly in the rare coin market and things have looked far better ever since. New records have been made for well known rarities from time to time. The trend towards U. S. collecting has been toward specializing in U. S. coins with the result that some formerly rather common coins are now licked up and about off the market. There are not enough collectors of foreign, ancient and colonial coins, while the field is open to many more than at present.

You ask what is the prospect for more collecting and prices? They are indeed excellent. Many new collectors are entering the field, with the result many U. S. coins from 100 to 145 years old have become very scarce and hard to obtain. There are factors to assure even higher coin prices in the future. These include heavy expenditures for veterans, for housing and the manufacture of goods needed for reconversion and for public use; higher wages; the higher prices which most certainly will be granted by O.P.A. to meet costs of manufacturing; the rise in stock, and on commodities, on cotton, wheat, oats, rye corn and farmers, and truckers' products. Butter is 50 to 55c a pound, which the writer remembers at 12 cents as a boy. The ease of credit, the low interest rates, the difficulty in finding securities paying five to six per cent interest today. All the foregoing points to higher prices for everything including coins, paper money, curios and antiques.

It cannot be otherwise and the price line will probably go upward, even if at a slower pace.

I believe HOBBIES advertisers offer their items as cheaply as they can possibly be offered and bought by collectors.

It is no slight to them to say that prices are advancing and will continue to advance. It is rather an invitation to get onto the coin bandwagon while there is yet room to get these fine items which are now advertised in HOBBIES.

Few holders of coins among dealers have stocks on hand they have held for 10 or 15 years. If they have, they profit handsomely at present demand and prices. Barring one or two of the biggest dealers I really do not know of any particularly big holdings of rare U. S. silver or gold, for collectors have mopped up most of such items. As a rule, the present dealer does a sort of hand to mouth trade with very few of each date or rarity. A few make claims as to their holdings, but tracked down and pinned down to certain rarities and rare dates, even of cents like 1793, 1799 and 1804, their reply becomes hazy or qualified, and they tell you they are "just sold out," or "don't have anything like that in only good condition, which you inquired for." They offer you five and six hundred dollar coins instead.

To tell the truth I have never known a time when a 1793 cent in only good condition was so hard to find. I recently had a chance to sell one for fifteen dollars, a good price, and could not find one, nor could I get one from any dealer I wrote to. That's how "easy" it is when it comes to a show down to obtain a moderately rare U. S. coin today. From this example is it any wonder why prices continue to go up and coins continue to be marked up by coin dealers?

Strange as it seems, every issue of United States paper currency bears with this curious notation: "Theaur Amer Septant Sigil"—an abbreviation of Theaur Americae Septentrionalai Sigillum, meaning "The Seal of the Treasury of North America." Origin of the legend is obscure, but it is believed to have been suggested when it was hoped Canada would become a part of the United States, but no reason exists for the curious wording. John Hix.

The Sunday Republic, Philadelphia, 1878, has this item:—The head of Liberty on the new dollar is taken from life; it is that of a teacher in a Philadelphia public school.

oOo

Those interested in numismatic-Napoleonana should secure a St. Helena copper half-penny, 1821, said to be the only coin ever issued for the Island. These coins are not scarce.

oOo

The children of Sweden liked to get toy horses for Christmas, because, up to the twentieth century, toy horses were used as money in Sweden.

oOo

The ancient Chinese boosted taxes by inflating weights and measures. By doubling the weight, a farmer would have to pay tax on two bushels of wheat instead of one bushel.

An exchange says the bagpipe is proven to be a very ancient instrument by the fact that it is found on a coin of the Emperor Nero. (FCR)

TWO EARLY BREECH LOADERS

is of the ordinary size, without encumbrance of any kind. Its weight is no greater than the ordinary weight of a common gun, and it only differs from the latter externally, in having an iron breech with a wooden stock, which breech is handsomely finished and engraved. By a simple contrivance within this stock, the breech-pin of the barrel is opened as the gun is cocked. A cartridge (of which we shall speak) is placed in this opening, and on pulling the trigger, the pin closes the barrel tight, a strong block of steel falls behind it, and the gun primes itself and is discharged all at one motion. There is nothing complicated in the machinery, but, on the contrary, it is so simple that it can hardly by any accident, get out of order, and in case of such accident, any worker in iron can repair the break. By this contrivance a rifle is made capable of being loaded at the breech as often as it is fired off, and as rapidly as a man's hand can move to throw in a cartridge. This is at the rate of twelve shots per minute, for a person who has practised with the gun; a velocity sufficient to make one man fully equal to a dozen armed with ordinary rifles. Another variety of the same gun is now nearly completed by the patentees, which differs not at all from this in external appearance, except that in place of the ramrod is a tube of the same size, capable of containing twenty-four cartridges, which, by a very simple contrivance, are so arranged that they are placed in the barrel, one by one, and fired successively, without interruption. The moment that the twenty-fourth ball is fired, this gun may be used as the first one, loaded at the breech, and be fired at the rate of twelve in a minute. But the chief strength of this formidable weapon rests on the cartridge which is used, and for which the gun is expressly manufactured. This cartridge, which is also patented, is simply a loaded ball. A hollow cone of lead, or rather a bullet elongated on one side in a hollow cylinder to about one inch in length, is filled with powder, and the end covered with a thin piece of cork, through the center of which is a small hole, to admit fire from the priming. As each ball goes out, the cork cap remains in the barrel, and is carried out in front of the next ball, sweeping thoroughly all the dirt with it. The gun may thus be discharged from forty to fifty times, in good weather, without needing a swab. The barrel may be detached at a single blow of a hammer or stone, and a swab run through it in a moment, at any time; the operation of cleansing occupying no longer than the ordinary loading of a common gun. The priming of the rifle is in small pulls, of which one hundred are placed in a box, from which the gun supplies itself without fail.—Journal of Commerce.

INDIAN RELICS

INDIAN LORE ANCIENT and OTHERWISE By WILSON STRALEY

Many years ago Samuel Smiles published a collection of his essays under the title "Self-Help," which is today found listed among the classics. From the chapter on "Character" we quote: "... It is related of Lord Edward Fitzgerald that, while traveling in Canada, in company with the Indians, he was shocked by the sight of a poor squaw trudging along laden with her husband's trappings while the chief himself walked on unincumbered. Lord Edward at once relieved the squaw of her pack by placing it upon his own shoulders—a beautiful instance of what the French call politesse de coeur—the inbred politeness of the true gentleman." No doubt Lord Edward was not aware that there was a plausible reason for the custom of the male Indians to travel unincumbered and thus place the burden bearing upon the females of the tribe. The practice stemmed from the fact that the men must ever be alert to protect the women, children and aged from any attack by enemy tribes and to kill any game encountered for food. The squaws did not resent the practice, but took it as their task and duty.

In his History of Arkansas, Hempstead calls attention to the statement that no one ever saw an Indian with white hair, but mentions these instances: There was a prominent Osage chief in Arkansas named Tesh-u-him-ga, or "White Hair," and the head chief of the Big Osages bore the name "Pa-hek-saw," or "Pa-hus-ka," which in English signified "White Hair." Ta-ka-to-kuh, the Cherokee Chief, at sixty-five years of age had snow white hair, and Dick Justice, who lived to be over a hundred, had white hair.—Fred W. Allsopp in "Folklore of Romantic Arkansas," p. 24.

Rain-in-the-Face, noted Sioux Indian chief died on September 12. He was 62 and participated in the Custer massacre.—Kansas City (Mo.) Star, September 18, 1905.

Two ancient Indian shelter sites on Darby creek (Pennsylvania) were recently excavated by a amateur archaeologists and numerous arrowheads, grinding implements and potsherds were uncovered; these are now on exhibition at the University museum, Philadelphia, according to a news report.

Indian relics which he has spent many years collecting and in which he has invested a small fortune were shown last night by J. G. Braecklein at a meeting of the Greater Kansas City Council of the American Pioneer Trails association. The meeting was held at the Braecklein home, 3850 East Sixtieth Street Terrace, in observance of his eightieth birthday anniversary. A 3-legged skillet forged by a blacksmith for frying buffalo meat on the prairie was described by the Indian relic authority as one of the finest he had seen. With it were buffalo knife and fork. Some of the articles shown were made in Independence in 1849 for use on the Sante Fe trail in the gold rush. Spears found in the Missouri Ozarks and pieces of flint more than 1,000 years old were displayed.—Kansas City (Mo.) Times, September 19, 1945.

Copper Axes in Museum Exhibit

Twenty axes made of native copper by the early Indians, of what is now Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana, are on display in the entrance hall of the Kalamazoo, Mich., Public Museum. These are from the extensive collection of Donald O. Boude-man, well known collector.

These crude axes were fashioned by being hammered into shape with stone hammers and were finished by trimming the uneven edges with sharp flints and then smoothing their surfaces by rubbing or grinding with pieces of sandstone.

These early metal workers had no knowledge of casting copper, Boude-man points out, and probably no heat sufficient to cause the metal to melt. The melting point of copper is more than 1,000 degrees and for that reason casting of it could not be done since prehistoric man had only open fires which could produce sufficient heat for that purpose.

These axes were not grooved around like the stone axes but either notched or curved in to facilitate their attachment to their wooden handles. The ancient Indians found that copper was a great improvement over stone for making their implements as axes made of copper possessed the weight, durability and cutting efficiency lacking in their stone axes and tools.

Such axes were probably used as tomahawks in warfare and in time of peace served as a handy tool around their abodes, as modern hunters use their camp axes today, says Boude-man. The weight of these axes varies from a pound to over seven pounds and their age is estimated at several hundreds of years before the arrival of the white man. They then preferred the iron axes which the early whites traded them for furs.

Nine of the axes in the exhibit are from various counties in Michigan, including one from Kalamazoo County, and the rest from Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana. Similar copper implements have been found buried as deep as 25 feet which indicates their extreme age

BOOKS ON WHALES AND WHALING

By E. LEE DORSETT

Space does not permit me to give a check list of the books and pamphlets on whales and whaling but, following are a few of the books that are outstanding, and while not very rare, are at least not easy to obtain. Some are fiction while other contain the historical side of Whales and Whaling.

1. Aldrich, Herbert—Eight Months in the Arctic and Siberia With the Arctic Whalers.
2. Andrews, Roy Chapman—Whale Hunting With Gun and Camera.
3. Ashley, Clifford—The Whale Ships of New Bedford.
4. Bennett, F. D.—Narrative of a Whaling Voyage Round the Globe from the year 1833 to 1836. (2 Vol.)
5. Bullen, Frank—The Cruise of the Cachelot.
6. Chatterton, E. K.—Whalers and Whaling.
7. Colnett, James—A Voyage to the South Pacific and Round Cape Horn.
8. Hunter, John (M. D.)—Observations On the Structure and Oeconomy of the Whale. 1797.

9. Macy, W. H.—There She Blows.
10. Melville, Herman—Moby Dick. Numerous editions.
11. Mullet, J. C.—A five Year Whaling Voyage.
12. Scammons, Chas. M.—The Marine Mammals of the Northwestern Coast of North America.
13. Spears, John R.—The Story of the New England Whalers.
14. Starbuck, Alexander—The History of the American Whale Fishery From the Earliest Inception to the Year 1876.
15. Tripp, W. H.—There Goes Flukes.

These are only a very few of the many books on the subject. A brief list of some of the other authors are as follows;—H. H. Bodfish, J. Ross Browne, Albert Church, William M. Davis, William J. Dakin, E. P. Hohman, Basil Lubbock, Charles Nordhoff, Allen Villiers and many others.

It is fortunate that in the last ten years there has been a wave of interest passing over this country to preserve all of those writings and objects that pertain to the early history of the United States. So far as I know here is only one early American Whaling-ship in existence today. Not one of the American Clipper Ships remains on the Atlantic coast, and only two ships of the American Revolution and the War of 1812 remain, and they would have been lost had it not been for the sentiment of the general public.

Some time ago, the writer received a tragic letter from the curator of the Whaling Museum at Hull, England. He included one of his few remaining catalogs and stated that "through enemy's action the entire museum and its contents were completely destroyed." Nothing can be more cruel than wanton destruction of the irreplaceable relics of the past.

BOOKS RECEIVED

Historical Collection

The prize historical book of 1945, not only from the angle of collecting but from the angle of general knowledge, is M. J. McCosker's work, "The Historical Collection of the Insurance Company of North America."

The fact that it was privately printed to describe a great collection and therefore will not be pushed by a commercial publisher, may keep down the number of copies circulated. However, it is a book that ought to be in the hands of every collector, every library, and every historical society in the country.

The book is expertly arranged and printed and its contents most ably edited. The collection of marine paintings so admirably illustrated adds considerably to the knowledge gained on this subject. Primarily it illustrates and describes the early fire equipment of the colonial period of the struggling young republic together with a magnificent display of fire markers in color.

"Uranium and Atomic Power"

This book is timely and ought to attract a goodly number of readers. It is authored by Jack De Ment and H. C. Dake, the latter the well-known mineralogist acquainted with many readers of HOBBIES. It is published by the Chemical Publishing Company of Brooklyn.

When we bought the Loyola University mineral collection, we held it two years without looking at it. Finally, last summer, we sorted out all the semi-precious we wanted to keep and a nice collection of fluorescent. It was fortunate that we held it, because the atomic bomb was exploded about that time, and before we sold the balance, we picked out a nice collection of uranium material. The rest went to Ward's Natural Science Establishment. When Mr. Vance came here, we told him we knew what he wanted. He wanted the radio-active minerals such as beryllium, pitchblende, franklinite, etc., which were more or less profuse in this great collection. In the mysteries of the atomic bomb, one of these radio active minerals sets off the other so that they can be timed to explode at the right place. It is the uranium that is the center of activity, and its cracking does the work.

We have read a great deal on the atomic subject lately and experimented with the uranium in our possession. We are working to invent an atomic bomb the size of a pea, that we can carry around in our left-hand vest pocket. When completed, we can drop it in front of an enemy, or anyone we want to dispose of, while talking to him. He disappears without a trace. Whereas the radio active minerals in our right-hand vest pocket protect the dropper so that no harm comes to him. We figure that in this way we can rid the world of our enemies and critics without risk or harm to ourselves.

This book does not tell how to make these miniature bombs, but it does give a lot of technical information to students, provided you can understand it.

Johnnie Appleseed

Missouri—I would not miss a single number. I hope your suggestion for a Johnny Appleseed Memorial stamp (one hundred years or so since Appleseed's death) might be put into effect. Appleseed is truly American folklore. I wanted to ask, too, has anyone the hobby of collecting trees—all kinds of beautiful, historical and useful trees—pictures of them and details pertaining thereto. —Mrs. Varner White.

The Scotch is Scarce

Wyoming—I couldn't get along without HOBBIES before but since the works of art appeared, (Aug. issue) I know I can't miss a number now. On your Publisher's Page you say you can get a drink of Scotch for two shillings. I'm a full blooded Scot, but I can't get a drink for two shillings. —Harrison W. Busby.

We'll Have More of Everything Soon

Oregon — HOBBIES grows in interest each month. Please keep the Publisher's Page; add more of buttons and dolls, guns and stamp lore, when possible, more miniatura and please accept our thanks for numbering every page at the top. If it's old-fashioned, then please keep on being old-fashioned. —Ruby W. Dunn.

We Need It

Indiana—Want to tell you how much we enjoy HOBBIES and Mr. Lightner certainly writes an excellent editorial page. Do trust that with war restrictions lifted, things go well for you. —Mrs. T. E. Huston.

Wants No More Wah!

Massachusetts—I want to congratulate you on the splendid editorial in the September issue. I wish each American would be made to read it and compelled to give time in which to do some real thinking; that is our trouble—so little thinking. Give us more editorials like that, please. —Aimes Austin.

Quite So!

Iowa—We are glad HOBBIES has so much business that it is swamped, but we are not glad it is swamped. That's different. —C. D. McGregor.

Xmas Cheer

Pennsylvania—I am so delighted with my HOBBIES that I should like to give it as a Christmas gift to three friends. —Mrs. C. T. Hunt.

Back From the Wars

Massachusetts—I subscribed to your magazine while I was overseas and enjoyed it immensely, but unfortunately I was disabled and evacuated back to the States after having read only a couple of issues. However, those I did read were sure terrific. Thanking you for the pleasure and swell reading your magazine brought me over there, I remain—Anthony Kielbasa.

Army Lad's Longing

New York—I miss HOBBIES an awful lot, and it will be so very nice to get it again. I don't know if you quite realize it, but HOBBIES makes it possible for me to shop for things in spite of being in the army. So far, all the folks I've had dealings with have been grand. —George S. Wooden.

It's On Its Way Out

West Virginia—If I read nothing but your editorial page your magazine would be worth its price. I like Mr. Lightner's clear-cut policies, and adore him for not "straddling" on the New Deal issues. —Mrs. Fred S. Peterson.

Snowbound

Maine—Please send HOBBIES for another year. I can't seem to get along without it—especially snowed in way up here in Maine. —Mrs. Harry S. Reed.

My, That's A Big Price

Indiana—Another lady asked me to sell her my July HOBBIES and offered me $1.00 for it, but I could not sell one of my magazines. —Mrs. H. B. Yewell.

Appreciation

Mississippi—Mr. Lightner, we are not in accord politically, as you may well imagine, since I am of the "Deep South" and naturally a Democrat. However, I must tell you how much I enjoy your editorials, most especially those of political bent. I do get a good laugh out of them. They are so plain spoken, and you are a man of such courage of conviction. I like your frankness and out-spokenness. I think you deserve words of credit for carrying on with HOBBIES in the face of such tremendous odds. Don't worry about the covers of HOBBIES not being colored or all prettied up. You put the difference on the inside between the covers. I have been wanting to write you since you scored your subscribers for not mentioning the cover on HOBBIES for August, 1944. No doubt, most people were like myself—really appreciated it, but did not take time out to let you know. I never go through my stocks of HOBBIES without pausing to look at the cover on that number. I love it and have studied every detail of it. That was a most interesting one on HOBBIES of July, 1944. (I believe.) Being, almost frantically, a lover of old things, I just couldn't do without HOBBIES for it puts me in touch with things that I am enabled to obtain when, but for HOBBIES, I could not. Your articles are most enlightening. I have enjoyed the one on Lincoln (continued) and find the articles such as this and others contributed by your readers, as well as your own, of vast interest. Don't feel discouraged if your readers seem neglectful in advising you of their appreciation. I dare say the greater proportion are like myself, do appreciate HOBBIES to the utmost, but just do not think until reminded to let you know we do. —Mrs. A. B. Furlow.

You Can At Least Look

Illinois—Enclosed please find subscription. The Hobby Show was grand but prices for the articles I looked at—colored creamers—exorbitant, but nice to look at. —Bertha Snyder.

From the Old Skipper

Rhode Island—It's swell to do business with a crowd like HOBBIES. We like everything you do. We like your magazine; we like your little cards reminding advertisers that they better tear around and segregate some stuff for the next issue. We adore Mr. Lightner's editorials, and we agree with every word he writes, and HOW we do! —Whaling Schooner, by the Skipper.

It Paid

California—My ad in your November number has been so fruitful, I wish to again subscribe to HOBBIES. —Ethel McIntyre.

A Precinct Worker, Maybe

Wisconsin—I enjoy every issue of HOBBIES, especially the editorials. Many of my friends feel sure you have missed your real vocation. You should have been a politician. —Mrs. Wynona Hauser.

Paper Situation Is Easing

Illinois—Yes, siree and you betcha! Here I am again with the annual renewal, and am I ever GLAD that you are accepting renewals! It's a grand Christmas present to myself. This renewal is to start with the January, 1946, issue. Whether you enjoy it or not, I think the paper you have been using lately in HOBBIES is much easier to read, as there is less reflection from the color and quality of the print paper now available. Anyway, who cares what the paper is, so long as you are able to maintain your usual standard of interesting reading in all departments. More power to you and the editorials, and best Holiday Wishes to the entire staff. —Grace Beam.

Better Late than Never

New York—Can't begin to tell you how much I enjoyed your magazine, HOBBIES, while stationed on Guam during the past year. Spent many pleasant hours reading and rereading the articles on antiques. Always looked forward to receiving your splendid publication even though I did get copies a couple of months late due to distance and shipping difficulties. —R. R. Baker.

Essence of Elegant Effusion

Illinois—Ever since I enjoyed the real privilege of your kind invitation to your exquisite home, its fond memory has inspired me daily and has left such an indelible impression on me that my heart craves expression of true appreciation and gratitude to you for the rare privilege of beholding your outstanding collection of antiques which really defies description. I have repeatedly visualized your home as a veritable mansion to my friends who stand aghast and awe inspired in the mere verbal recital of this real fairyland. Hope you will agree with me that it is never too late to express true appreciation, as time seems to enhance this spirit of gratitude in such an enjoyment of these rich gifts that we become doubly grateful in its true realization. Please be assured, Mr. Lightner, we shall never forget that memorable evening in your luxurious home. Its fond remembrance has helped to bring that bright touch of color and poetry into my work-a-day world making its cares a little lighter and the heart a little brighter. For this I am indeed most grateful. —Louise Boal.

Those Modern Paintings

Florida—Your August article on "Modern Paintings Bring Modern Prices" is the richest thing I have read in a long time. Bravo! —Mrs. L. R. Andrews.

We Hope So

Kansas—I do hope you will get some help and will continue on with HOBBIES. We are in the same shape in this little town. We have run a general store for over fifty years here, and we can't get any help. I have been married forty-one years and never had to help in the store until two years ago. So don't give up yet, maybe better days are ahead. —Ethel Dalton.

BELLS

Carillons

There are said to be approximately 250 carillons in the world, with 30 or so of them in the United States. No doubt many of the world's carillons were silenced during the holiday season just passed because of the depredations of war. However, in America, the ringing of our carillons this holiday season took on sweetness that had been missing for four tragic years.

Probably our best known carillon in America is the Singing Tower at Mountain Lake, Fla., which the late Edward W. Bok gave to the nation in memory of his parents. This singing tower rises to 203 feet. It is constructed of Georgia pink marble and coquina stone of Florida. It has 71 bells in all which weigh from 17 pounds to 11 tons each. The carillon has a setting of 300 live oaks, each approximately 35 feet high. Former President Coolidge presided at the dedicatory ceremonies of the carillon in 1929 and accepted the bell in the name of the American people.

Bells 2500 Years Old

More than 100 years ago, a British traveler, Sir Austen Layard, stood beside the Tigris River viewing the ruins of what he believed was the remains of Nineveh, capital of the old empire of Assyria.

He decided to do some excavating to support his contention, and was well rewarded. Among the objects uncovered were small bronze bells, which he dated as 2,500 years old. They were made of ten parts of copper and one part tin.

MODERN BELL

Mrs. Franklin B. Spear, a bell collector of Michigan, who specializes in the history of the bells in her state, dropped into HOBBIES office recently to chat about bells and bell lore.

In commenting on her researches, Mrs. Spear spoke of the confusion relating to the modern bell with a square star. On one side is the phrase "Saignelegier 1878" and on the other side "Chiantel Fondeur".

The bell comes in four sizes and is distributed by some of the larger mail order houses.

The fact that "1878" is printed on the bells leads new collectors to believe that the bell is of 1878 vintage, but this is the year the bell pattern was brought from Switzerland. These bells retail for 50c up, when ordered from mail order sources.

English Theatrical Programs

Given Harvard University

Edward Knoblock, English dramatist, who passed away in London last July, left his collection of English theatrical programs to Harvard University, under the terms of his will made public a short time ago.

The late Knoblock had a hobby of attending first night performances, keeping each program with his notes. Knoblock, was author of the well known musicale, "Merrie England."

One of his last requests was that his ashes be "thrown in the Thames obscurely at night."

TRAVEL SEARCH FOR BELLS

By A. C. Meyer
$2.50 postpaid.

In the last 10 years, semi-retired, Mr. Meyer and his wife, also a bell enthusiast, indulged their hobby of bell collecting, which has taken them to many parts of the world. In every city and virtually every crossroads, they added interesting specimens to their collection. Now "grounded" because of the war, Mr. Meyer has summarized it all in a down-to-earth story.

How to Make Money by Mail

Down-to-earth facts, directions (illustrated) for running business profitably, using expertly for your good fortune the employees, trains, planes which Gov't places at your disposal. CHIEF. Get orders by mail, ship by express or freight or mail, get out of the kindergarten... 3d printing of this book now selling. It's YOUR winner.

THE EASY WAY

to start new or expand your present occupation. Do it NOW. Extraordinary plain, simple skill, know-how. No theory. Fact story of rich experience of author E. Rice day-by-day. How many times have we heard: "I wish I had some money, this patent would earn me a fortune," or "why can't my crop pay better?" or "I wish I knew how to sell this gadget myself," or "why should my boss alone do this when I know too how the money is made?" Listen, you do not need money to start this Rice way. His method automatically pays all bills same day rendered, no bank loans, pay as you go, no borrowing from relatives or friends, no salesmen. Also no worry, quickly a fortune of your own all paid for. Rice paid off $5000 in mortgages a year after using this idea.

44 Years of PROOF

Sounds fishy? Sure, but this has been done steadily for 44 years, depression or no depression, by the author: that is why he wrote this book to pass the good word along. Make it go with anything you have which is salable. Rice made his plan go when living in one room in a city lodging house. Turn your city or country home, your work, your hobby, into money. How to get orders at cost of only $4 for each $100 taken in. The popular error to avoid in trying for sales. Business won free while others have to pay for it. How to conceive the money-getting advertisement. Profitable changes from ordinary ideas and methods. Not usual cut-dried pattern, 60 adventures, a dictated book in everyday talk, no dictionary writing.

Take a chance on this book being worth a fortune to you and yours and send $2.50. Book mailed same day order is received. Or ask two friends to chip in 83 cents each with your 84c to get this book. Hundreds of buyers whose letters we show you declare emphatically its superlative goodness. Follow its easy pattern for success. Cloth-bound, 512 pp., 8 1/2 by 5 1/2. NATURAL HISTORY

'TIS SAID

Insects don't chirp in unison, as people probably think they do, it just sounds that way. In a chorus of crickets or katydids, it's every man for himself, and they are males, since it's only the males that can chirp.

The "Ear of Dionysius," a great artificial cavern near Syracuse, Sicily, amplifies every sound, and low whispers are audible far away. According to legend, the tyrant Dionysius placed his political prisoners in this cavern so that he might overhear their conversations.

At home the hobby of Roger L. Almond, of Wisconsin, was searching for rare plants. He continued it in the South Pacific, where he was stationed with a ship repair unit. There he found a deep bronze orchid, never before catalogued by botanists.

Persons traveling near Rockport Tex., open their eyes wide in astonishment as they come upon a giant tree. Known as the "bishop oak," it is said to be the largest live tree of its species in the world. It is 48 feet in circumference and its leafy crown

ALONG THE TRAIL

Prof. William T. Shaw of California recently retired from teaching at Fresno State College to devote his time to research and writing. Prof. Shaw, a lover of natural history since childhood, when infantile paralysis forced him outdoors for the sake of his health, has had many contacts with projects in natural history.

During his school years he carried out self-appointed collecting of bird specimens for museums. In 1906 he made a collection of birds for the Lewis Clark Exposition in Portland. In the few years following he collected Alaskan bird life species for the Alaskan-Yukon Exposition in Seattle.

The Old West Lives On

The romance and historical development of Fresno County, California, is visible to visitors to the Fresno Memorial County Historical Society on the second floor of the Fresno Memorial Auditorium. Many early day relics of the west are exhibited to the public by the Society. Among them are yellow paged documents, guns, photographs, and even the first strong box used by the county treasurer at Millerton, the first county seat.

Other interesting articles include an 1899 telephone directory, which listed various newspapers and publications of the period, as well as prominent Fresno families. There is also a copy of the Fresno Times dated January 28, 1864, and also copies of a weekly, the Fresno Expositor, dated 1870.

Petrified bones of prehistoric animals and shells picked up in the vicinity are displayed in glass compartments, as are also relics from Indian burial mounds, and scores of hand made baskets, mortars and arrow heads.

An old time safe may be seen in the exhibit, along with old farming implements, gold scales, handcuffs, fire department badges, helmets and money belts. Also, of particular interest to miniaturia fans, the Society has on display exact replicas of two lumber wagons, early day vehicles of Fresno County.

Montana Moss Agate

To the lay mind, the Montana moss agate has always been a very deep mystery, yet regardless of the fact that millions of years have been required to perfect the stone with all its beautiful moss spots and scenic effects, geological science has, through its many years of research, discovered the process followed out by Mother Nature in her artful method of perfecting this most wonderful gem. The agate is composed of pure silica. The silica was brought to the surface by super-heated water of the underground channels and scattered around over the surface in various shapes and sizes. After being exposed to the sun it began to evaporate and harden into the crystal stage. This early hardening process caused the stone to develop flaws, fissures and feed pipes; these openings were gradually filled by water which contained various mineral oxides such as manganese, iron, nickel and copper; the water dried out leaving the mineral to stain the agate in such forms as ferns, trees and moss spots. These many flaws and feed-pipes were later filled and covered with other layers of new silica making the entire stone a solid agate free from flaws or openings. The manganese oxide produces a black color, the iron produces a red, the copper, green, and nickel producing a pale blue. The various blends of color quite often found in the agate are the effects of two or more of these oxides carried into the flaws at the same time. Quite frequently ferns are formed with a rich brown top and a black stem or base. This is due to the fact that iron oxide entered the flaw first and was followed by manganese and the mixture produced a perfect two-colored fern. The question is often asked why the oxide formed into ferns and scenic effects. Nature performs this stunt in the agate just as she does with moisture on the window pane on a cold night. Mineral oxide will make these forms because it contains moisture, and evaporation takes place under sun heat just as it does under extreme cold on the window. The Montana agate is the third hardest stone known and must be cut with diamond dust. The scale of hardness is diamond, which is ten points, sapphire has nine, and the agate seven. (There being no eight-point stone.) Once polished the stone cannot be scratched with the hardest steel.—J. L. Fox, Yellowstone Gem Co.

ject. Although I am not primarily interested in Jade as a collector, I found while browsing about, a small booklet entitled, "Chinese Jade—Why Called Lucky Stone." A title page states that "all quotations are translated from the original Chinese history."

A message from the Sacred Order above, reading "Chou will be the next dynasty, assisted by Lan-Shune."

"According to Chinese history, Father Lan-Shune, a 'Real Man' was taught political science based on liberty and freedom, by Tao. The truth of his precepts, however, was not acceptable to the Monarchy of the Shang dynasty (1766-1222 B. C.)

"Lan-Shune . . . disguised himself as a peddler and mingled with the people to learn more of their feeling and characteristics. After twenty years . . . he concluded that his teachings received from Tao were perfectly correct.

"At the age of sixty . . . since he was a fisherman he therefore went with clear and pious mind, to the Twei Soi Holy Brook in an endeavor to get in communication, through the sacred Carp, with the Sacred Order above. He was very successful, catching a Carp, which when opened, revealed a Jade tablet, bearing a letter from the Sacred Order.

"Twenty years later the Chou dynasty started and Lan-Shune became Chancellor. The people enjoyed liberty and freedom through Lan-Shune's policies for 876, or during thirty-six prosperous generations of the Chou Men-wang family.

"The Chinese believe Jade is a protection against misfortune, considering it as an omen of good luck, slow and sure.

"Another chapter pertains to 'Varieties of Jade,' and another to 'Methods of Jade Cutting.'

"Each issue of HOBBIES is so very fascinating I am desirous of obtaining more and more knowledge pertaining to the old, the unusual, the fine, in arts, handcraft, furniture—imported and our own American antiques."—Frances Smith Baker, Indiana.

Emeralds were once believed to benefit the eyes and amethysts were believed to be an aid in warding off drunkenness, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The Force of Little Things

It has been truly said that "It's the little things of life that count." That has been forcefully impressed upon us in recent months. The smallest imaginable portion of matter—the atom—ended a world conflict in a hurry. As we enter upon the threshold of another year, everyone, whether or not a lover of the little things, must bow in homage to the power of the little things of life.

oOo

Alice in Wonderland-like, the beginning collector of miniaturia, marvels at the stretch of the imagination that is employed by the maker of miniaturia or the seasoned miniaturia collector. A navy bean dipped in white enamel becomes an egg for the tiny basket in the miniature kitchen. Old setting from rings and earrings become chandelier pendants in the clever mind of the miniaturia enthusiast; thimbles in reverse hold potted plants, and painted and shellacked they fit into any room color scheme; lead pencils can be converted into curtain rods; an empty spool (thread), sawed in the middle and enameled becomes a modern hassock; dress shirt studs become door knobs, to mention a few things.

—O—

William Donahey, Chicago, who has delighted big and little folks alike with his clever comic strips and books on the Teenie Weenies, quite naturally is a lover of little things. He has an interesting assembly of miniatures, bestowed largely through the affection of his readers.

Your reporter recalls a very pleasant dinner party at the Donahey's a few years ago, when Mr. Donahey proudly displayed some of the treasures that he had thus acquired. On that particular evening he also showed his guests a doll house, which he was building and furnishing, assisted by Mrs. Donahey, a well-known writer of children's books, for the little daughter of their household maid.

Memory Village

The "Sunday Light," San Antonio, Tex., tells how one of its local business men, Leopold M. Lux, bridged the years between childhood and adulthood by a miniature village, built around castles and precipices. It is Lux's "town of memories," and it is built in his own backyard.

"Made of colored cement and small rocks, the little village rises sharply over sheer cliffs spanned by wooden bridges and drawbridges and its walls, towers and roads blend into a veritable gamut of blues, greens, browns and reds.

"The replica is 18 feet long and 12 feet high, duplicating, on a scale of one-eighth inch to a foot, a monastery, cathedral, 13th century castles with terraces, turrets, moats, dungeons and drawbridges. It contains 46 buildings with 200 trees and shrubs.

"With twinkling blue eyes, Lux points out the school where the teacher 'spanked small boys and also me once.'

"He explains that, at the age of 20, he left the village of Lindenthal, near Cologne, Germany, and went to work in Minneapolis making surgical instruments.

"Then, in 1924, he established his artificial limb company in San Antonio.

"Three years ago, in his leisure time, Lux, who had studied sculpturing in Lindenthal, began building his

'town of memories.' Imbedded in the cement are wires for bulbs to light up the castles and houses and, skillfully hidden, small water faucets to fill the mountain springs and streams.

"Each tiny tower, of which there are hundreds, was painstakingly made by cutting and fitting together pieces of tin as a base for the cement, and Lux has reproduced his village, even to the nobles' and servants' stairways running up the broad castle terraces. Matching the finely-sculptured and tinted village are old carved chests, tables and Dresden china in Lux's home. His wife, her father, and his daughters were all sculptors."

Jack London's Father's Autobiography

(As Revealed in His "Primer of Astrology")

By WM. McDEVITT

THE FOLLOWING autobiography is collected from the scattered biographical statements written and published by Professor W. H. Chaney, in his "Primer of Astrology," issued in parts (eight, altogether) in St. Louis in 1890. This rare volume seems unknown to Irving Stone, the biographer of London, as Stone states that he doesn't know where Chaney was born and doesn't know that Chaney instead of being "short" was five feet nine and a half inches tall. Mr. Stone makes no mention of this work of Chaney, and several of the statements in the Stone biography are disproved by a reference to Chaney's own very deliberative biography.

It may be mentioned that Chaney's reasons for being so detailed is that he uses his own career and character as a sort of guinea pig to prove or disprove the forecasts or "indications" in astrology from his own "nativity." Chaney's dedication of his "great work:" "I dedicate this work, the first of the kind ever published in America . . . the little children . . . the celestial science of Astrology . . . St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 1, 1890." (Note how this month January recurs in Chaney's and in London's horoscope.)

"My horoscope teaches that Nature did much for me and that I should have been above the average in goodness, but losing my father at nine, without a home, without friends, imposed upon, tyrannized over and cruelly flogged, the good that was in me was dwarfed and the evil so highly developed that when but 16 I enjoyed the reputation of being the worst boy in the county and all predicted that I would die in prison or on the gallows. Disowned by relatives, who looked upon me as a disgrace, I changed from place to place till every door of respectability was closed against me. Then, becoming reckless, I went to sea, secretly resolved to turn pirate, for if mankind would not respect me I would make them fear me. Two years on the ocean completed my primary studies as a wild rover, and I resolved to graduate by entering the Navy, but nine months on a man-of-war seemed to satisfy me, and I deserted in July, 1840, from the receiving ship Columbus, then lying in Boston harbor."

Chaney then details his vagabond tour, traveling by night and sleeping by day, to the then "far West," namely, Ohio. Sailed awhile on the Great lakes, then down the Ohio and the Mississippi toward New Orleans. His entire possessions now consisted of $1.27. Sick and without a change of clothing, he managed to find some friends at the Sciota Furnace, got a pair of shirts and a secondhand hand-me-down, procured a job as school-

"At the Sign of the Crest"

CRISPIN-PENN-HOLME Coat-of-Arms

By MABEL LOUISE KEECH

THE ORIGINAL PLAN for this issue, the month of February set aside for outstanding patriots, was to pay tribute to William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania. When searching for history and Coat-of-Arms of the Crispin family for a client, the index referred me to a splendid series of articles on Crispin and allied families, by M. Jackson Crispin of Berwick, Pa., (See "Crest Corner") in which he had included history of Penn and Holme, both allied families. Through the courtesy of the editor of the Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, and Mr. Crispin, excerpts from the series, appearing in 1929, are included in this article.

An added and unexpected favor came in the receipt of Mr. Crispin's own engraved bookplate and the permission to use it—it is reproduced here for the enlightenment and pleasure of all of you who are readers.

William Penn's Coat-of-Arms is the last one in the second line, and is described with the others later in the article, as No. 8.

The history of and stories about William Penn, the founder, have been written and read so often, that it is unnecessary to repeat them here, only to remind us of some dates, and bring out the family history which is sometimes neglected in historical treatises.

He was born in London in 1644, and spent the last few years of his life there, dying in Ruscombe in 1718. He was the son of Admiral William Penn. His grandson, Granville, has a book entitled "Memorial of Professional Life and Times of Sir William Penn, Knight, Admiral and General of the Fleet during the Interregnum," in which he tells of the daring adventures and outstanding abilities of our William's father.

Sir William was disappointed that his son would not follow a military career, but his mind was quite made up, as we know he later became a Quaker. However, we see his picture in armour, at the age of 22, when he was attending Oxford University. When William was in the Tower of London for his publications against certain government and religious practices, his father petitioned for his release. In 1681 Penn received the large grant of land in America which he named Pennsylvania. He also named Philadelphia.

John Penn, William's first son by his second wife, was the only son born in America. He, Thomas the second son by first wife, Richard, and Richard's son John, all took their turn as provincial governors of Pennsylvania.

In England, the Penn cycle closes in 1869 with the death of the last male Penn, Rev. Thomas Gordon Penn. The Penn castle on Portland Isles, Dorset, then went out of the family.

The following material on the Penn, Bradshaw, Holme and Crispin families is culled from Mr. Crispin's articles in Volume 53 of the Pennsylvania Magazine.

"Admiral William Penn took a very important part in the final events of the Restoration in 1660, for which he was knighted and made commissioner of the Admiralty and Governor of the Town and Port of Kinsale. He was likewise Victualer of the Royal Navy. When Admiral Penn died, the government owed him 16,000 pounds for his services as Victualer. His heir, William Penn, knew it would be difficult for King Charles to pay this debt, and therefore appealed to him and to his brother Duke of York who were both grateful for his aid in placing Charles on the throne. As a result he was granted the 40,000 square miles of land, the largest amount ever received in America by one person. March 4, 1681, was the date.

"William had two cousins—Capt. William Markham and Capt. William Crispin. The former he sent as Deputy Governor. The latter, 'the trusted friend and associate of his father,' he appointed as Chief Justice, and besides other commissions, gave him 5,000 acres of land, which was later divided among his children.

"As we said, Admiral Penn and Capt. Crispin were close friends. When he was 25, Crispin married Rebecca Bradshaw, the daughter of Ralph Bradshaw, by his wife Rachel Penn, sister of Admiral Penn, and daughter of Captain Giles Penn, who was grandfather of William Penn the Founder. This made the two Williams cousins by marriage.

"The Crispins are an ancient and honorable family in Great Britain, tracing descent from the great Norman dukes. Count Gilbert Crispin, Baron of Tilliers, was first cousin of Duke Robert II, father of William the Conqueror. His three celebrated sons accompanied the Conqueror to England and took part in the conflict at Hastings.

"A memorial window portraying St. Andrew, sailor and Apostle, has been dedicated to Capt. Crispin's father in the church at Carrickfergus. The bronze tablet beneath this window bears only his arms and parts of the exact wording of the entry concerning his death, as recorded in Admiral Penn's Journal."

Capt. William Crispin had twelve children, 5 by his first wife, Rebecca Bradshaw; and 7 by his second wife, Jane Chudleigh. On his way to America in the fall of 1681, on the ship "John and Sarah," Capt. Crispin died; and his youngest son, Silas, born probably in London in 1655, who had accompanied him, arriving safely at Philadelphia, was the one to establish the Crispin family here.

He came before William Penn, and shortly before the arrival of Penn's Surveyor General, Captain Thomas Holme, "with his sons and marriageable daughters." Captain Holme built his home at Front and Arch streets, Philadelphia, while young Silas lived with the surveyor, Thomas Fairman in what is now Kensington, a few miles north of the Captain's—not so far though to prevent Silas from courting and marrying Hester Holme, the daughter of Captain Thomas. This was about 1633, and soon after, he came into actual possession of the grant of land William Penn had deeded to Silas and his father. "The place now forms a part of Pennypack Park, in the 35th Ward of the City of Philadelphia. It is, as the crow flies, ten miles northeast of the City Hall and nearly two miles north of the Roosevelt Boulevard."

Mr. M. Jackson Crispin has in his possession a letter written by Robert Assheton to William Penn—both cousins of Silas Crispin, concerning his last illness: "Cosin Crispin was Tapt yesterday for a Trapany or Dropsie has very bad how it will go with him I can't tell but am in hopes heel recover it." Silas died May 31st, 1711, and "his original will in which he is styled 'Gent,' is preserved in the City Hall, Philadelphia.

The line through which Mr. M. Jackson descends is Silas, Thomas, Silas, Silas, Benjamin, Benjamin Franklin Sr., Benjamin Franklin Jr., and M. Jackson, named after his maternal grandfather.

Thomas and his sisters inherited the land of their maternal grandfather, Capt. Thomas Holme.

Several important landmarks have been preserved which originated with these families. Among them the Crispin Cemetery Corporation, the cemetery on Thomas Holme's land; the log school house "which antedates the famous Germantown School"; the Lower Dublin Academy; the city of Holmesburg; the Thomas Holme Branch of the Free Library of Philadelphia; Holmesburg Athanaeum Association; Crispin Memorial Athletic Field in Berwick; and in 1929, the Holme-Crispin Park. "Hence, the Holme-Crispin Park, which is part of the Pennypack Park surrounding the Crispin Cemetery where Thomas Holme lies buried, has come into existence, thus recognizing the services of this distinguished man who drew up the plans and plotted the City of Philadelphia and the Province of Pennsylvania."

Benjamin Franklin Jr., father of M. Jackson Crispin, is still remembered for his contributions to the community life of Berwick. Among his interests we find: a founder of the Berwick Rolling Mills; president of the First National Bank; founder and first president of the Berwick Electric Light Co., Vice-President of the Berwick Sotre Company, Limited; trustee of the Jackson and Crispin Estate; director of the public schools; charter member of the Board of trustees of the Y. M. C. A.; trustee of the Methodist Church; President of the Mountain Grove Camp Meeting Association; active in the Republican party. In his honor the Crispin Athletic Field was presented and named.

Since 1872 members of the Crispin family have been connected with "Jackson and Woodin" which is now the American Car and Foundry Company. Mordecai William Jackson, maternal grandfather of "our" Mr. Crispin was a co-founder.

All through his story of his ancestors in this series of articles, Mr. Crispin has woven the tales of unusual active lives—lives steering themselves and their families toward the worth-while home and community projects. Note that the Bradshaw, Holme, and PENN Coats-of-Arms are pictured in his bookplate, and described with the Crispins.

M. Jackson Crispin's Bookplate

(The colored plate in the Pennsylvania Magazine, Vol. 53, opposite page 314 has quarters 1 & 8 the same. Mr. Crispin has now added another Crispin Coat as #5, moved Bradshaw, Holme and Penn along and omitted the original #8, repetition of #1.)

Quarterly of 8: 1, Erminois three lions rampant azure armed and lan- gued purple, for Crispin: 2, Sable a lion rampant or billette sable a bordure or, for Crispin Tillieres; 3, Fusily gules and argent on a chief of the second two lions passant combatant of the first, for Crispin (Bec-Crispin); 4, Gules a griffin segreant or on a chief of the second two pallets of the first, for Crispin (Devonshire); 5, Fusily argent and gules, for Crispin's Sires de Dangu; 6, Argent two bendlets cotised between as many martlets sable in the fesse point a cinquefoil gules, for Bradshaw; 7, Argent a chevron azure between three chaplets gules within a bordure sable with ten roundels, for Holme; 8, Argent on a fesse cotised sable three plates, for PENN. Crest—A demi-griffin erased with wings addorsed azure. Motto—Dum clavum, rectum teneam.

1 translated: A gold shield instead of white (as in ermine) with black ermine tails, charged with three blue (azure) lions in rampant attitude with purple (purpure) toenails and tongues (armed and langued).—CRISPIN.

2 translated: A black (sable) shield in which is charged a gold (or) lion in rampant attitude covered with small black rectangles (billets), all this within a gold border or bordure.—CRISPIN TILLIERES.

3 translated: The lower two-thirds of this shield is covered with diamond shaped figures (fusily) alternating red and silver (gules and argent). The upper one-third or chief is silver ("of the second" color named) and is charged with two lions standing with one paw raised (passant) and facing each other (combatant). The lions are red ("of the first" color named).—BEC-CRISPIN.

4 translated: A red (gules) shield on which is charged, in the lower two-thirds, a gold (or) griffin in rampant (segreant) attitude. The upper one-third is a band or chief of gold ("of the second" color named) on which are two narrow vertical bands reaching from the top to the bottom of the sheet (pallets)—red or of the first color named) in color.—CRISPIN of Devonshire.

5 translated: A silver shield scattered with red diamond-shaped figures.—CRISPINS SIREs de DANGU.

6 translated: A silver shield on which are changed two narrow bands diagonally across the shield (bendlets) with still narrower bands above and below the bendlets (cotised). These bands are between two (as many as bendlets) birds without feet (martlets). The bendlets, the cotisses, and the martlets, are all black (sable). There is a red (gules) five-petalled flower (cinquefoil) in the center of the shield, which is called the fesse point. The fesse is the band across the center, therefore the fesse point would be the center of this imaginary fesse.—BRADSHAW.

7 translated: A silver (argent) shield in which is charged a blue (azure) chevron between three red (gules) wreaths or chaplets. These are all within a black (sables) border or bordure and on this border are ten silver disks called roundels. Roundels are of many colors according to different names but when on black are silver.—HOLME.

8 translated: A silver (argent) shield on which is a horizontal band or fesse bordered with two lines (cotised) all of black (sable). On this black fesse are three plates or silver disks called roundels.—PENN.

Crest translated: A blue (azure) half griffin with hair as though violently torn away (erased), with wings back to back (addorsed).

The motto which belongs to the Penn family—Dum clavum, rectum teneam, is translated: "While I hold the tiller right."

The interpretations of the symbols in the 8 quarterings will be given in order as they appear, without repetition if the symbol occurs more than once.

The lion is the king of beasts, emblematical of service to his country and deathless courage.

A billet is a small rectangular figure placed vertically, and when there are several on a shield or on a symbol the term is "billette." The billette represents a letter of great importance as folded for transmission, and the one who delivers this message is "a man who obtained credence, knowledge, and faith in his words and deeds, and who was secret in his affairs."

The bordure is a bearing of great antiquity and granted as an augmentation of honor.

A fusil is a diamond shaped figure and when there are several on a shield the term is fusily. The fusil denotes travel and labor. There is another similar figure called the lozenge, but the fusil is narrower and slightly longer.

The griffin is a mythical beast, and the story goes that when the English were in India exploring that country, the natives gave them to understand that they should not attempt to take the treasures of precious stones and metals from their mines and mountains, as a huge beast would attack them. This beast was eight times the size of a lion, with the head of a wolf, beak talons and wings of an eagle, and the body of a lion. The English of course laughed at this story, but they went home to use the griffin as a symbol of the "guardian of the treasury." They carved the griffin on their banks and in their treasury buildings at first, then later granted it to the men who were financial experts in their country's economic affairs.

The pallet is a diminutive of pale, which is a vertical strip occupying one-third of the center of the shield, and having the same meaning. It typifies strength and fortitude and has been bestowed on those who have impaled or otherwise defended cities, and, "for standing uprightly to their prince and country."

The bend, a bendlet, and a cotise are all diagonal bands running from the upper right to the lower left of the shield unless followed, in the description, by the word "sinister" when they are from the upper left to the lower right. The bend is the width of one-third of the shield, while the others are diminutives, the cotise being only a line. The bend represents the scarf or shield suspender of a knight or military commander, and denotes defense or protection. It was at first assumed by men of knightly and military rank and has since often been granted to those who have distinguished themselves as commanders.

The marlet is a footless swallow, and is said to need no feet because it is a messenger of good will, never touching the ground. Just one marlet placed in the center, upper center, or upper right of the shield is the differencing symbol of the fourth son of the family, and as he inherits no land, he needs no feet!

A cinquefoil, as the formation of the word implies, is a five-petalled flower, and it stands for peace, hope, and joy.

The chevron "likened unto the roof of a house," is emblematic of protection of the defenseless. It was also granted to one who built forts and churches for his country.

A chaplet is a wreath—the crown of joy, and an award of admiration. Roundels are disk-like figures, with a different name attached to those of different colors. The ten roundels on the black border in the Holme Coat-of-Arms, will necessarily be silver, and are usually called plates, denoting generosity. In the Penn Coat-of-Arms the figures are called "plates" and have the same significance.

The fesse and the chief are two of the nine so-called "Honorable Ordinaries," straight-sided symbols occupying one-third of the width of the shield, first emblem used to identify men encased in armour. The chief, as found in Crispin of Devonshire, is a band across the upper one-third of the shield and symbolizes rank, authority, dignity and dominion. The fesse, as in the Penn, is a band across the center of the shield, and is the military girdle of honor. These Ordinaries represent parts of the body or armour: the chief is the head, therefore is in the upper part of the shield, and the most important part; any symbol on the chief takes precedence in honor over those below it. The fesse placed across the center of the shield is in the position of the girdle around the body, and as mentioned before, the bend or bendlet is in the position of the suspender holding the shield.

Colors are representative of the personal characteristics of the original bearer, granted only if he be worthy. Ermine, a form of ermine, signifies purity and nobility; blue, loyalty, and truth; purple, royalty; sables, the fur lining of royal robes, (as is also ermine) constancy and nobility; gold, generosity and elevation of mind; red, courage and magnanimity; silver, sincerity and peace. The symbol below the shield is a green seven-headed hydra.

We quote from Mr. Crispin's letter: "As regards the Crispin Arms, I found in my researches the crest and arms of Captain William Crispin on many letters in the British Museum, and as you have undoubtedly observed in the April issue of my article on Captain William Crispin I reproduced photographically both the crest and the seal. As these had not been registered in the College of Arms I had them confirmed to him and to the descendants of my father, Benjamin Franklin Crispin II. The first issue, reproduces these arms in color. In the July issue I produced the confirmation of them by the Office of Arms in Ireland. In the October issue I reproduced a confirmation of them to him by the College of Arms in England.

"I see no reason why all of the descendants of Captain William Crispin cannot use these arms. Theoretically any descendant of his other than those of my father would have to pay a fee to have them confirmed to them by the College of Arms in England.

"As regards my quartered Coat-of-Arms which appears in the October issue, these were only confirmed to me and, therefore, can only be used by my descendants. I believe that these could, also, be confirmed to any descendant of Captain William Crispin by payment of a fee to the College of Arms in England. "The Tillières arms which you refer to are very early arms. The ones that I have had reproduced were executed by Gilbert Crispin VII, baron de Tillières, on a charter of 1259 kept among the Archives of St. Père de Chartres which is my reason for having them confirmed. They were emblazoned upon the ceiling of the church at Tillières by Jean Goujon about 1525, which edifice was erected at the beginning of the 16th century, where they still appear."

CREST CORNER

Mr. Crispin, we salute you today, and thank you for the outstanding contribution that you, one of the descendants of the Crispin, Penn, Holme and other early American families, have made in the preservation of exceptional historical records. Although the longest of your life-span is a memory, and a rich one, we hope that for many more years you may be with us to stir us to greater zeal in preparing for our selves and our posterity, the records that should be our heritage.

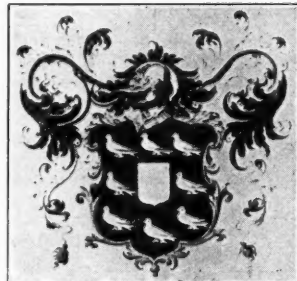

For the sake of our readers, I wish to mention just a few of the interesting milestones along M. Jackson Crispin's journey. He was born in Berwick, Pa.; graduate of Princeton; Pres. of the 1st National Bank of Berwick, and of the Crispin Cemetery Association; connected with U. S. Metal and Manufacturing Co. and American Car and Foundry Co.; trustee of State College at Bloomsburg, Pa.; active in such local interests as High School Athletic Field, Hospital, American Legion, War Loan Drives; church; politics; Masonic and patriotic-lineal societies, and country clubs. When corresponding with me, he was putting over the Victory Loan Campaign.

Besides his articles and his family history, he has to his credit and for our aid, the "Falaise Roll Recording Prominent Companions of William Duke of Normandy at the Conquest of England." Not only is this a roll, but a family record of these men. In the book is a photograph of a bronze tablet listing these names, which was erected in 1931 in the Chapel of the Chateau of William the Conqueror at Falaise, Normandy. Mr. Crispin writes, "The arms as I have them on my book plate are emblazoned upon the walls there."

QUERIES and REPLIES

Christmas preparations were on when this copy went to press, which we think accounts for the lack of interest in this department. We expect both Replies and Queries next month.

"It would be indeed strange if we should derive pleasure from tracing back to the original construction of the great monuments of human design which are scattered all over the world, and yet be content to remain in ignorance of our own origin."—Pres. Tyler.

The Picture POST CARD

POSTCARDS HELP IN SCHOOL

By ELBERT B. ROSE

OUR SPLENDID collection of post cards has a much stronger interest than just the hobby of collecting cards. The collection as it continues in force today has been marked by a few interesting incidents. It has served a definite purpose in education. Our children in the grade schools, as well as hundreds of fellow pupils have learned a storehouse of lessons from the fascinating use of postcards in their school work.

The children, themselves, discovered the utility of post cards in the various studies, such as geography, government, and history.

A few years ago while studying the names of States and the capitals, one of the boys asked if he could take a set of State cards to school. In looking for the particular State that the teacher asked for, the capital was announced and greater interest was developed. What the state grows, what it produces, its history, etc., are discussed in the study of the cards. The fact that all four of our State sets have been asked for and used by the teachers proves their educational value.

As greater interest developed by our children, they began to give me tips in advance of the cards they would be needing in their studies. Before they reached Franklin, Washington, Lincoln, the Presidents and various events in American history, I found in hobby shops in our city, through ads in HOBBIES, the type of cards needed. Thanksgiving cards furnish pictures of the Pilgrims and Plymouth Rock.

When it comes to the study of our government, our large album of hundreds of views of Washington, D. C., serves as a guide to the capitol of the nation. Another album contains views of a large number of American flags, Betsy Ross, and Francis Scott Key.

Each year as the study course develops, the cards go to school, and after service in the class room they are returned to their places in the album.

Another benefit has been that Mom and Pop are in the game, too, getting the cards ready for use. It has been some time since the school doors closed behind us, but the children have not permitted our education to stagnate.

Many young folks have become post card collectors since seeing our collection. One boy has a collection of cards of views showing trolley cars and trains, and a girl has started a collection of church cards.

Living History Book

AS FAR as he can determine, Sgt. Donald L. Hopkins, now stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C., has the largest private collection of newspapers in the world. Some 4,500 papers in 37 different languages make this hobby unique and fascinating. Several deans of schools of journalism have taken an active interest in this hobby.

Only the entire first page of each paper is saved, otherwise a warehouse would be needed. When 500 papers of similar size are obtained they are bound into a volume. Dailies, weeklies, political, religious, foreign, college and service papers make up this collection.

The hobby started when Hopkins was a journalism student at Boston University. One of the assignment was to secure a few country weeklies in order to compare them with metropolitan dailies for typography, make-up and general news presentation. These few papers proved so interesting a hobby was born then and there and has gained momentum in eight years.

The only newspaper published in a million square miles (The Yellowknife Blade put out in entirety by one man in the Canadian Yukon) took months of correspondence to land. The World War I Armistice edition of Stars and Stripes published in Paris is a valued paper.

Although Hopkins doesn't specialize in old or period papers a few have been accumulated. His oldest is a copy of the Worcester (Mass.) Gazette dated January 5, 1792. Another old one that commands a select spot is the Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Boston (Mass.) Transcript put out in 1830.

Practically every foreign country in the world is represented in this hobby. Even during the war he secured papers from Russia (Red Star and Pravda) and one on tissue paper out of Germany. Underground papers are naturally hard to get but he has many photostatic copies of original papers that circulated in France.

When you look back over this collection of newspapers you realize he has assembled a living history book that almost breathes with historic events. Unlike the academic history book, which is apt to be stiff and formal with many meaningless dates, these volumes contain all the human interest that always accompanies momentous events, presented by the world's best news writers.

teacher, and began his new vocation January 13, 1841, "the day I was 21 years old." Illness that prevented him from leaving on the flatboat for North Carolina saved him, he avers, from the career of piracy that the 20-year old discouraged youth had deliberately chosen. He tells how he clung to that piracy decision for two years.

Our author, after devoting numerous pages to bitter exhortation of the alleged vices of the then Prince of Wales and of the Prince's son, Albert Victor, and other bitter denunciation of the English aristocracy, the London astrologists, especially the "Robber Raphael" and the "Repeal Ring," gets back to his "guinea pig" or his "mutton." He gives his birth as being January 13, 11:30 p. m., 1821, although his mother said it was after midnight. The date is interesting because of the fact that Jack London's birthdate was January 12, (1876). The father's "nativity" is so nearly identical with his son's that the student of astrology will assume that careers were, as Chaney would say, "indicated but not caused" by the same or by similar planetary influences.

There are indeed some interesting parallels: both were sailors at the same age and under somewhat similar circumstances. (Remember that Jack never met his father, and that the father refused to admit in his letters to his son that the "peripatetic astrologer" was the father of the famous author.

Second parallel: both were notorious ramblers all their life; both were authors of novels, poetry, sociological essays, rationalistic disquisitions; both had similar sicknesses; both were overweight, each of them at one age or another scaling away over 200 pounds; both were socialistic, although the old man's sociology was much more inchoate than Jack's Marxian dogmatism; both were divorced; both contemplated suicide seriously, the son apparently succumbing to the urge; both were notorious scrappers and direct actionists; both were showmen and delighted in public appearances; both dramatized their careers; both were inordinately autobiographic; both were at one time more than ordinarily handsome (in a manly way); both went to jail; both had an unusually large number of lawsuits; in fact, it looks as if Jack were really a chip off the old block, if he wasn't indeed an old block himself.

From 1841 to 1867 the Professor tried: law, for ten years, authorship of novels, and poetry, salesmanship, lecturing, etc., etc. About the age of 45 he got around in his wide compass of all the arts and sciences to his fine choice, astrology. One of his earliest "accidents" in this new career happened in 1867 in New York City. Boss Tweed pinched the ardent but careless predictor and his teacher, Professor Broughton. Chaney was "detained" for 28 weeks without trial and then set free, the charge being dismissed. According to our author, poetic retribution pursued Tweed, for the Boss died subsequently in the very same hoosegow, the Ludlow-street jail!

Now "to the road again." He turns up in Oregon about 1870, and in 1874 and 1875 lingers in San Francisco, where the crowning event of his career appears to have happened—the birth of his son, Jack London. After a stormy period in San Francisco, his consort attempted suicide and the doughty astrologist fled the wrath of the woman and the populace. Back in Portland once more, he soon got embroiled in a terrific dogfight with the sister of the editor of the most important daily, Harvey Scott of the Oregonian. This woman, a famous overland pioneer and well-known novelist and occultist, etc., Chaney thereafter always styled "the duniway." Another important enemy of his in Portland was a millionaire lumberman, married to the Professor's sister. Chaney charges him with loot and plunder, in cahoots with the railroad octopus, etc.

Continuing his eternal hegira, Chaney lingers awhile in Chicago, where he conducts his classes, reads nativities, lectures, etc. In 1890 he is found in St. Louis, organizing the Magic Circle and publishing (in disparate parts) his masterpiece, the Primer of Astrology, hereafter to be a prized collector's item because of its rarity, its picturesquely personal confessionalism, and its bearing on the career and character of Jack London. It appears that this modern George Borrow died a year or two later than his communications in 1896-97 with his son Jack.

The one persistent and consistent feature of his hectic odyssey through life was that he was always poor. It seems that he never at any time possessed more than a few dollars. He was chronically in debt to printers and, when possible, to landlords. Yet he says that the wealthy, as individuals, were always friendly with him, even when they were ashamed to be known as his friends.

To show that Chaney had a gift for writing, let me adduce just a single example of his style when he attempts to be somewhat stylistic:

"Even the comet, the mail-carrier from one system of worlds to another, as he drives by torch-light across the abyss of space profound, coming up to each goal with a curve, bending the necks of his fiery courses in a graceful elongated sphere, even he can be calculated in his orbit and his return precisely foretold."

Under more benign influences and in more fortunate circumstances, W. H. Chaney might have, I believe, rivaled in success my favorite literary character, Walter Savage Landor, whom he resembled in several important details of character and individuality. Chaney was really an "original," if there ever was one.

and moved just outside the realm of mortal man. In contrast to this implication, the Lincoln of tomorrow will be portrayed as a man with many virtues and with some faults. He will be shown reacting to his environment as others react to theirs. If he were a hero, he was also human. If the Lincoln literature of tomorrow can give us a true and faithful likeness of Lincoln as an individual, the Lincoln student and collector should welcome it as a true collector's item. Reviewing Lincoln's life as a whole, it appears unthinkable that we should regard him as an individual, as a person, and as a human with less respect than we would a legendary Lincoln. Being human, Lincoln deserves infinitely more credit for the contribution he made to our country. It would appear, then, that writers of the future are mandated to search for the truth and to record it faithfully. We need not fear any loss in Lincoln's prestige or reputation. Conversely, we will probably find his influence extended.
